9 United States of America,
10 Plaintiff,
11 v.
12 Adrian Fontes,
13 Defendant.

No. CV-26-00066-PHX-SMB
AMENDED ORDER

15 The Court now considers Secretary of the State of Arizona, Adrian Fontes’ 16 (“Secretary Fontes”) Motion to Dismiss (Doc. 25). The Motion is fully briefed. The Court 17 grants the Motion for the following reasons.

18 I. BACKGROUND

19 The Complaint alleges as follows. In 2025, the Attorney General of the United 20 States, pursuant to Title III of the Civil Rights Act of 1960, 52 U.S.C. § 20701 et seq., 21 requested that Secretary Fontes produce “Arizona’s statewide voter registration list” (the 22 “SVRL”). (Doc. 1 at 3 ¶ 9, 5 at ¶¶21–22.) The SVRL includes a registered voter’s “full 23 name, date of birth, residential address, his or her state driver’s license number or the last 24 four digits of the registrant’s social security number.” (Id. at 6 ¶ 27.) The Attorney General 25 made this request pursuant to her “investigation into Arizona compliance with federal 26 election law”—particularly the National Voter Registration Act (“NVRA”), 52 U.S.C.
27 § 20501 et seq., and the Help America Vote Act (“HAVA”), 52 U.S.C. § 20901 et seq. (Id.
28 at 3 ¶ 9.)

1 Secretary Fontes refused the Attorney General’s request, citing “state and federal 2 privacy laws which he asserts prohibits Arizona from producing the information sought.”
3 (Id. at 7 ¶ 29.) In so doing, the Attorney General avers that Secretary Fontes violated Title 4 III. (Id. ¶ 31–33.) The Attorney General thus brought the present suit to compel Secretary 5 Fontes to produce the SVRL.

6 II. LEGAL STANDARD

7 At the outset, in accord with United States v. Powell, 379 U.S. 48, 57–58 (1964), 8 the Court finds that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure applies to this action.¹ To survive 9 a Rule 12(b)(6) motion for failure to state a claim, a complaint must meet the requirements 10 of Rule 8(a)(2). Rule 8(a)(2) requires a “short and plain statement of the claim showing 11 that the pleader is entitled to relief,” so that the defendant has “fair notice of what 12 the . . . claim is and the grounds upon which it rests.” Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S.
13 544, 555 (2007) (alteration in original) (quoting Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 47 (1957)).
14 This notice exists if the pleader sets forth “factual content that allows the court to draw the 15 reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged.” Ashcroft v.
16 Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). “Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, 17 supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.” Id.

18 Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) “can be based on the lack of a cognizable legal theory 19 or the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory.” Balistreri v.
20 Pacifica Police Dep’t, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1988). A complaint that sets forth a

21 ¹ The Attorney General sued twenty-nine states and the District of Columbia for production 22 of their VRLs. Justice Department Sues Five Additional States for Failure to Produce

25 produce-voter-rolls. As of the date of this Order, five courts have dismissed the Attorney 26 General’s lawsuits. United States v. Weber, No. 2:25-CV-09149-DOC-ADS, 2026 WL
27 118807 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 15, 2026); United States v. Oregon, No. 6:25-CV-01666-MTK, 28 2026 WL 318402 (D. Or. Feb. 5, 2026); United States v. Benson, No. 1:25-CV-1148, 2026
WL 362789 (W.D. Mich. Feb. 10, 2026); United States v. Galvin, No. CV 25-13816-LTS, 2026 WL 972129 (D. Mass. Apr. 9, 2026); United States v. Amore, No.
25-CV-00639-MSM-PAS, 2026 WL 1040637 (D.R.I. Apr. 17, 2026). Each court which addressed the issue found that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply to the Attorney General’s lawsuit. See, e.g., Weber, 2026 WL 118807 at *8 (“The Supreme Court has also affirmed that the federal government’s demands for documents are governed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure (FRCP).”); Oregon, 2026 WL 318402, at *8; Benson, 2026 WL 362789, at *7; Amore, 2026 WL 1040637, at *4.

1 cognizable legal theory will survive a motion to dismiss if it contains sufficient factual 2 matter, which, if accepted as true, states a claim to relief that is “plausible on its face.”
3 Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). Plausibility does not equal 4 “probability,” but requires “more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted 5 unlawfully.” Id. “Where a complaint pleads facts that are ‘merely consistent with’ a 6 defendant’s liability, it ‘stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility’” 7 Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557).

8 In ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the well-pleaded factual allegations 9 are taken as true and construed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Cousins 10 v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063, 1067 (9th Cir. 2009). However, legal conclusions couched as 11 factual allegations are not given a presumption of truthfulness, and “conclusory allegations 12 of law and unwarranted inferences are not sufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss.” Pareto 13 v. FDIC, 139 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1998). A court ordinarily may not consider evidence 14 outside the pleadings when ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. See United States 15 v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 907 (9th Cir. 2003). “A court may, however, consider 16 materials—documents attached to the complaint, documents incorporated by reference in 17 the complaint, or matters of judicial notice—without converting the motion to dismiss into 18 a motion for summary judgment.” Id. at 908.

19 III. DISCUSSION

20 This case presents a legal question: is the Attorney General entitled to the SVRL 21 under Title III. It does not present a political question: should the Attorney General be 22 entitled to the SVRL. The latter is reserved for the legislative and executive branches.
23 Nonetheless, much of the briefing conflates these distinct inquiries, offering policy 24 arguments in place of legal analysis. While such arguments may carry political weight, 25 they are irrelevant to the Court’s limited task. The Court therefore begins, as it must, with 26 the relevant text of Title III.

27 A. Title III

28 Whether the Attorney General is entitled to the SVRL under Title III is a matter of 1 statutory interpretation. As such, the Court begins with Title III’s “plain statutory text.”

2 Altera Corp. & Subsidiaries v. Comm’r of Internal Revenue, 926 F.3d 1061, 1075 (9th Cir.
3 2019). “[W]hen deciding whether the language is plain, [courts] must read the words in 4 their context and with a view to their place in the overall statutory scheme.” Id. (citation 5 modified) (quoting King v. Burwell, 576 U.S. 473, 486 (2015)).

6 To start, § 20701 requires states to preserve certain documents related to federal 7 elections:

8 Every officer of election shall retain and preserve, for a period of twenty-two 9 months from the date of any general, special, or primary election of which 10 candidates for the office of President, Vice President, presidential elector, 11 Member of the Senate, Member of the House of Representatives, or Resident 12 Commissioner from the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico are voted for, all records and papers which come into his possession relating to any application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in such election.

13 The Court refers to these documents as “§ 20701 documents.” Section 20703 goes on to 14 provide that the Attorney General may request a state’s § 20701 documents:

15 Any record or paper required by section 20701 of this title to be retained and 16 preserved shall, upon demand in writing by the Attorney General or his 17 representative directed to the person having custody, possession, or control of such record or paper, be made available for inspection, reproduction, and 18 copying at the principal office of such custodian by the Attorney General or his representative. This demand shall contain a statement of the basis and the 19 purpose therefor.

20 The briefing primarily concerns whether the Attorney General’s SVRL request contains an 21 adequate “statement of the basis and the purpose therefor” under § 20703. However, this 22 issue is moot if the SVRL is not a § 20701 document in the first instance.

23 To summarize, under § 20703, the Attorney General may only request documents 24 that are “required by [§ 20701] to be retained and preserved.” Again, these documents are 25 those “which come into [the state’s] possession relating to any application, registration, 26 payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in” certain federal elections.” § 20701.
27 Thus, the question becomes whether the SVRL fits this definition. To answer this question, 28 the Court explores the SVRL generally.

1 B. The SVRL

2 The SVRL is “a statewide database of voter registration information that contains 3 the name and registration information of every registered voter in [the] state.” A.R.S.
4 § 16-168(J). The information contained in a registration form is outlined in full by A.R.S.
5 § 16-152 and includes details such as a registrant’s name, address, birthday, and driver 6 license number or social security number.² Under Arizona law, Secretary Fontes must 7 “provide for maintenance of the database, including provisions regarding removal of 8 ineligible voters that are consistent with the [NVRA] and the [HAVA].” § 16-168(J). The 9 Court will discuss the NVRA and HAVA in more detail below, but in short, the NVRA 10 was enacted “to ensure that accurate and current voter registration rolls are maintained.”
11 § 20501(b)(4). Similarly, the HAVA regulates and requires states to maintain a 12 “computerized statewide voter registration list.” § 21083(a)(1)(A).

13 Secretary Fontes recognizes that “Arizona law provides for public access to portions 14 of the [SVRL], but expressly bars release of certain identifying information,” including a 15 voter’s social security number or driver’s license number. (Doc. 25 at 2 (citing 16 § 16-168(F).) Nonetheless, Secretary Fontes—adopting the court’s holding in 17 Benson—contends that the SVRL is not a § 20701 document. (Doc. 25 at 13.) The Court 18 agrees and finds Benson persuasive on this point and adopts its reasoning.

19 C. *Benson

20 In Benson, one of the many cases identical to this one, the Attorney General
21 requested Michigan’s voter registration list (“VRL”) pursuant to § 20703. 2026 WL
22 362789, at *1. Ultimately, the court held that Michigan’s VRL is not a § 20701 document 23 because it is “created by state officials” and is not a “document[] that people submit to the 24 State as part of the voter registration process.” Id. at *9. The court’s analysis proceeded 25 as follows.

26 The court began by analyzing § 20701’s use of the phrase “come into [the state’s] 27 possession.” Id. (quoting § 20701). The court found that this phrase “refer[s] to only those 28 ² Section 16-152(A)(12)(a) provides that a voter registrant may provide the last four digits of their social security number if they do not have a driver license number.

1 documents that state election officials receive from prospective voters.” Id. (emphasis 2 added). In the court’s view, that phrase would be superfluous if it also encompassed 3 records the state created. Id. First, a natural reading of the phrase “come into [the state’s] 4 possession” “refers to a process by which someone acquires an item from an external 5 source.” Id. Second, if § 20701 was intended to encompass records created by the state, 6 that meaning could have been achieved by omitting the phrase altogether. Id.

7 The court bolstered its interpretation based on the words following this phrase: “all 8 records and papers which come into [the state’s] possession relating to any application, 9 registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting.” § 20701 (emphasis 10 added). The court noted that “these terms refer[] to something that the voter submits or 11 does as part of the registration process” and thus refers to “records that election officials 12 receive, rather than create.” Benson, 2026 WL 362789, at *9. “Such an interpretation 13 makes sense given that when the CRA was passed, the federal government’s attempts to 14 protect the voting rights of Black citizens had been frustrated by state officials’ destruction 15 of voter registration applications.” Id. Thus, “[t]he CRA responded to that problem by 16 requiring states to preserve records that voters submit to them—not records that states 17 create.” Id.

18 Benson recognized that it might seem “needlessly pedantic” to distinguish “between 19 voter registration applications and the voter registration list” because the latter “is largely 20 a compilation of information from [voter] applications.” Id. at *10. However, the court 21 noted that Michigan’s VRL: “is not assembled purely from information in voter registration 22 applications”; is changed “based on data from the United States Social Security 23 Administration and information shared by other states”; and “includes individuals’ voting 24 histories, which is not information that would appear on a voter registration application.” 25 Id. Even so, the court noted that the distinction between voter registration applications and 26 VRLs “would still be significant” even if the VRL only comprised information contained 27 in § 20701 documents. Id. The court highlighted that the CRA is designed to facilitate the 28 disclosure of documents relating to voting eligibility, not voter information generally, even

1 if that voter information comes from § 20701 documents. Id. The court explained that “a 2 voter application can be examined to determine whether it was unlawfully rejected, 3 whereas a list of those who successfully registered to vote would be little help in such an 4 investigation.” Id.

5 The Benson court also noted that its interpretation of § 20703 is harmonious with 6 Title III generally. Id. In particular, the court noted § 20701 requires states to preserve 7 “any document subject to disclosure.” Id. Thus, in Benson’s view, if the VRL was found 8 to be “disclosable because it contains the same information as the individual voter 9 registration applications,” then “any document produced by a state that contains voter 10 information,” such as the VRL, “must be preserved.” Id. The court found that this 11 conclusion is untenable because “nothing in the CRA’s text implies an intent to require 12 states to preserve every election-related record that they create.” Id.

13 This Court separately notes that Benson’s interpretation is also harmonious with 14 § 20702. That provision creates liability for “[a]ny person . . . who willfully steals, 15 destroys, conceals, mutilates, or alters any” § 20701 document. § 20702 (emphasis 16 added). If the Attorney General can request the SVRL under § 20703, then § 20702 would 17 necessarily outlaw any person from altering the SVRL. However, this interpretation 18 conflicts with the very purpose of VRLs and would place Title III in conflict with the 19 NVRA and the HAVA. See United States v. Kittson, 161 F.4th 619, 627 (9th Cir. 2025) 20 (noting that “words of a statute must be read in their context and with a view to their place 21 in the overall statutory scheme” and that there is a goal “to understand [statutes] as a 22 symmetrical and coherent regulatory scheme and to fit, if possible, all parts into a 23 harmonious whole” (citation modified)).

24 The NVRA was enacted, in part, to “ensure that accurate and current voter 25 registration rolls are maintained.” § 20501(b)(4). To fulfill this purpose, the NVRA 26 creates a scheme, under which, states are required to “protect the integrity of the electoral 27 process by ensuring the maintenance of an accurate and current voter registration roll.” 28 § 20507(b) (emphasis added). Considering this requirement, if the SVRL were deemed a

1 § 20701 document, then the NVRA would conflict with § 20702 because it requires a state 2 to update or amend the SVRL as necessary. In short, the NVRA outlines a variety of 3 situations in which states are required to modify their VRLs where § 20702 would prohibit 4 such an alteration—assuming that a VRL qualifies as a § 20701 document.

5 Like the NVRA, the HAVA similarly requires states to “implement . . . a single, 6 uniform, official, centralized, interactive computerized statewide voter registration 7 list . . . that contains the name and registration information of every legally registered voter 8 in the State and assigns a unique identifier to each legally registered voter in the State.”
9 § 21083(a)(1)(A). Like the NVRA, the HAVA requires state to “perform list maintenance 10 with respect to the computerized list on a regular basis.” § 21083(a)(2)(B) (emphasis 11 added). Again, this requirement would be incongruous with § 20702 if the latter were 12 interpreted to include VRLs. To briefly restate the point, § 20703 provides that the 13 Attorney General may only request those documents states are required to preserve under 14 § 20701. If the SVRL were deemed such a document, then § 20702 would prohibit the 15 SVRL from being altered. This conclusion would directly conflict with both the NVRA 16 and the HAVA, which affirmatively requires states to modify its VRLs under certain 17 conditions.

18 Accordingly, based on the plain meaning of the text of § 20701, Arizona’s SVRL is 19 not a document subject to request by the Attorney General pursuant to § 20703.
20 Nevertheless, the Attorney General still contends that “Arizona’s [SVRL] falls within 21 Section [20701]’s broad definition of ‘all records and papers’ relating to registration to vote 22 in federal elections.” (Doc. 35 at 9.) The Court disagrees and addresses the Attorney 23 General’s arguments in turn.

24 D. The Attorney General’s Arguments

25 The Attorney general first argues that “courts that have applied [§ 20701] concluded 26 that . . . Title III does not exclude production of electronic or non-public records or what a 27 state may deem to be private or confidential information.” (Id.) Accepting this argument 28 as true, it does not compel a certain outcome here. Benson’s holding that VRLs are not

1 covered by § 20701 did not depend on VRLs being “electronic,” “non-public,” “private,” 2 or “confidential.” The Attorney General’s cited authority on this point does not suggest 3 that Benson was wrongly decided. The Attorney General relies on Alabama ex rel. Gallion 4 v. Rogers, 187 F. Supp. 848 (M.D. Ala. 1960) and Kennedy v. Lynd, 306 F.2d 222 (5th Cir.
5 1962). (Doc. 35 at 9.) However, both cases essentially reiterate the plain text of § 20701 6 and do not make any affirmative findings which would suggest that the SVRL is covered 7 by § 20701. For example, Gallion merely recognized that “[t]here is nothing uncertain 8 about that part of the [CRA] requiring the preservation and production of all records and 9 papers which are in the possession of an election official . . . if those records and papers 10 relate to the acts requisite to voting.” 187 F. Supp. at 855 (emphasis added). Similarly, 11 Lynd merely recognized that the documents covered by § 20701 are “sweeping,” but did 12 not make any additional finding which would suggest that § 20701’s “sweeping” language 13 includes the SVRL. See 306 F.2d at 226.

14 The Attorney General next argues that Benson “reached a few atextual conclusions” 15 and “read [§ 20701] narrower than Congress intended.” (Doc. 35 at 9.) The Attorney 16 General points out that “no other federal court has adopted such a limitation.” (Id. at 9–10.)
17 The Attorney General’s argument, while true, is of no value. No other federal court has 18 adopted the limitation imposed by Benson—a case that is only a few months old—because 19 that it was among the first courts to consider whether VRLs are covered by § 20701. More 20 broadly, the issue of what documents are covered by § 20701 has not been a heavily 21 litigated issue.

22 Nonetheless, the Attorney General avers that at least one court “addressed the scope 23 of records to be produced similarly refused to impose an artificial limit.” (Doc. 35 at 10.)
24 The Attorney General refers to Kennedy v. Lewis, 325 F.2d 210 (5th Cir. 1963). However, 25 Lewis does not suggest that Benson is incorrect. In Lewis, the court held that the Attorney 26 General was improperly: (1) only given the ability to investigate “the records pertaining to 27 [voters] who have successfully sought to qualify” to vote; and (2) denied the ability to 28 review “papers in the office subsequent to the date of the filing of the suit dealing with

1 subsequent registrations or elections.” Id. at 211–12. Thus, Lewis found that (1) § 20703 2 requests must not necessarily be tethered to a particular election; and (2) § 20701 covers 3 documents related to unsuccessful voter applications. Id. at 212. This second point was 4 particularly important in Lewis because “to limit the inspection to the documents on file 5 relative to those who have become qualified completely denies the Attorney General an 6 opportunity to inspect the records as to those who may have been illegally denied the right 7 to qualify.” Id. Indeed, the Benson court employed a similar logic in finding that § 20701 8 does not cover VRLs because a VRL is only “a list of those who successfully registered to 9 vote.” 2026 WL 362789, at *10. At bottom, Lewis does not comment on what documents 10 § 20701 covers beyond the documents at issue in that case—none of which are remotely 11 like the SVRL.

12 The Attorney General proceeds to argue that “courts addressing similar provisions 13 of federal election law interpret election records expansively.” (Doc. 35 at 10.) Even 14 assuming that this assertion is true, it is of little help in interpreting the statutes at issue in 15 this case. There is no canon of statutory construction which requires this Court to construe 16 Title III broadly merely because it pertains to election records. More importantly, the Court 17 will not superimpose an expansive definition where Title III, by its plain text, does not 18 tolerate such a definition. Thus, the Court sees little probative value in the Attorney 19 General’s citations to Judicial Watch, Inc. v. Lamone, 399 F. Supp. 3d 425 (D. Md. 2019), 20 Project Vote/Voting for America, Inc. v. Long, 682 F.3d 331 (4th Cir. 2012), and Public
21 Interest Legal Foundation, Inc. v. Bellows, 92 F.4th 36 (1st Cir. 2024) 22 to suggest that any statutory reference to election records must be construed broadly.

23 Nonetheless, these cases are of no import here. First, Title III was not at issue or 24 even discussed in those cases. Second, those cases were interpreting statutory language 25 from the NVRA which is sufficiently dissimilar from that at issue here.³ Again, the issue 26 here is determining whether the SVRL is a document “relating to any application,

27
28 ³ Although the Attorney General has sought other state’s VRLs under the NVRA, see, e.g., United States v. Weber, No. 2:25-CV-09149-DOC-ADS, 2026 WL 118807 (C.D. Cal. Jan. 15, 2026), the Attorney General has not done so here.

1 registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to voting in [a federal election].”
2 § 20701. It is true, however, that Lamone concerned, and ultimately concluded, that a VRL 3 qualifies as “a record concerning the implementation of programs and activities conducted 4 for the purpose of ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters.” 5 Lamone, 399 F. Supp. 3d at 437 (citation modified) (quoting § 20507(i)(1)). But even 6 accepting Lamone’s holding as true,⁴ it is not clear to this Court that even if a VRL 7 “concern[s] the implementation of programs and activities conducted for the purpose of 8 ensuring the accuracy and currency of official lists of eligible voters,” see § 20507(i)(1), 9 that it necessarily means a VRL is a document which “come[s] into [the state’s] possession 10 [and] relat[es] to [an] application, registration, payment of poll tax, or other act requisite to 11 voting in [a federal election],” § 20701. While the NVRA and Title III both relate to voting 12 registration, that similarity alone does little to aid this Court in interpreting the text of Title 13 III. More importantly, the NVRA’s statutory language is too dissimilar to be of any real 14 value in interpreting the text of § 20701. Indeed, the Attorney General does not attempt to 15 argue that § 20701 includes the SVRL based on its textual similarities to the NVRA.
16 Rather, the Attorney General argues for an expansive reading of § 20701 based on other 17 courts’ expansive readings of the NVRA. This argument is too attenuated to assist this 18 Court in interpreting the language of Title III itself.

19 The Attorney General then challenges Benson’s interpretation of the term “comes 20 into possession.” (Doc. 35 at 11.) To start, the Attorney General contends that Benson 21 misinterpreted that phrase and “refer[ed] to it as a ‘pedantic distinction’ and faulting 22 Congress for the confusion.” (Id.) This characterization of Benson is disingenuous.
23 Benson noted that “[i]f the distinction between voter registration applications and voter 24 registration lists is overly pedantic, it is a pedantic distinction made by Congress.” 2026 25 WL 362789, at *10 (emphasis omitted). However, Benson never asserted that the phrase 26 “comes into possession” creates a pedantic distinction. Indeed, earlier in the opinion, the 27 ⁴ Other courts disagree with Lamone’s finding on this point. See, e.g., Benson, 2026 WL 28 362789, at *6 (“[A] natural reading of § 20507(i) suggests that it requires states to disclose information regarding the process by which they maintain their voter registration list but not the list itself.”).

1 court expressly disavowed the notion that “a distinction between voter registration 2 applications and the voter registration list . . . may seem needlessly pedantic” by pointing 3 out the salient differences between these documents. Id.

4 The Attorney General next argues that the phrase “come into his possession,” 5 “focus[es] on how and when the officer gains possession of the records or documents in 6 the first instance. (Doc. 35 at 11.) This argument is unconvincing. Even accepting the 7 Attorney General’s proffered interpretation as tenable in isolation, it does not work in Title
8 III’s broader context. See King, 576 U.S. at 474 (noting that courts have a duty “to construe 9 statutes, not isolated provisions” (citation modified)). As discussed, the Attorney 10 General’s interpretation places § 20702 in conflict with multiple provisions of the NVRA 11 and HAVA. For example, the NVRA expressly allows states to develop a “program . . . to 12 systematically remove the names of ineligible voters from the official lists of eligible 13 voters.” § 20507(c)(2)(A). However, if the SVRL were deemed a § 20701 document, 14 § 20702 would preclude the state from altering the SVRL. The Court must avoid such an 15 interpretation of Title III.

16 Finally, the Attorney General argues that “[n]owhere does Title III limit the 17 information the Attorney General may receive.” (Doc. 35 at 12.) This argument is not 18 accurate. Section 20703 only allows the Attorney General to request § 20701 documents.
19 Even if § 20701 includes a categorically “sweeping” number of documents, see Lynd, 306 20 F.2d at 226, it is not limitless.

21 In short, the Attorney General fails to convince this Court to abandon Benson’s 22 logic. Neither does the Attorney General otherwise convince this Court that the SVRL is 23 a § 20701 document. Accordingly, the Court will dismiss the Attorney General’s claim.
