RE: PROVIDING RELIEF UNDER THE DREAM ACT FOR DREAMERS WITH EXPUNGED CONVICTIONS

Dear Senators Durbin and Graham and Representatives Roybal-Allard and Ros-Lehtinen:

On behalf of the 520 undersigned national, state, and local religious, civil rights, labor, ethnic, and immigration organizations, we respectfully ask that you: 1) ensure applicants with expunged convictions receive relief under the Dream Act of 2017;¹ and 2) update the Dream Act's misdemeanor bar to require imprisonment of more than one year. Specifically, we ask that you align the Dream Act's treatment of expunged convictions with that of the criminal justice system by recognizing rehabilitation and excluding them as disqualifying convictions. We make this request in light of the Dream Act's current language, which merely provides discretion to the Trump Administration to potentially waive expunged convictions. We also ask that you adopt more generous misdemeanor language, already present in multiple Republican Dream Act-like bills.

As you know, rehabilitative post-conviction remedies, colloquially known as "expungements," require an individual to satisfy statutory requirements, such as successfully completing probation, court-ordered classes, or other judicial mandates. By meeting these requirements, expungements can erase a conviction for the purpose of the criminal justice system. Expungement often restores the rights of individuals in the context of employment, housing, and voting. However, due to the punitive nature of our nation's immigration laws, expungement does not erase a conviction for the purposes of immigration relief, often leading to the deportation or denial of immigration benefits based on state convictions that the state's own criminal justice or court system sealed, expunged, or otherwise erased.²

To partially address this issue, the current version of the Dream Act allows the Secretary of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to elect to exercise discretion, on a case-by-case basis, for applicants with expunged convictions.³ Such discretion, while helpful, does not fully align

² See Matter of Roldan, 22 I&N Dec. 512 (BIA 1999); 50-State Comparison Judicial Expungement, Sealing, and Set-aside, Restoration of Rights Project, Aug. 2017, <http://restoration.ccsresourcecenter.org/> (Providing the full list of terms and different post-conviction relief mechanisms for all 50 states).

the treatment of convictions with the criminal justice system. Specifically, at the direction of the Trump Administration, the Secretary could, after a cursory review, easily deny all applicants with expunged convictions. Moreover, the Dream Act's current expungement language places the burden on U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) to re-adjudicate an applicant's expunged conviction, even though a state court judge already carefully and deliberately weighed the circumstances and concluded that a conviction merited expungement. Finally, many states, in addition or in lieu of the term "expungement," employ a variety of legal terms that encompass post-conviction relief. Failing to specifically list these assorted terms will cause regulatory confusion and lead USCIS to erroneously deny applications, particularly under an Administration that may implement the Dream Act in a literal and inflexible manner.

Importantly, many states limit what offenses can be expunged, with states often precluding serious and violent offenses from expungement. For example, while Illinois provides post-conviction relief for a variety of offenses, it explicitly excludes most felony offenses and certain misdemeanors such as driving under the influence, domestic violence, sexual abuse, and violation of a protection order.⁴ Similarly, South Carolina limits its post-conviction relief to first-time offenders and nonviolent offenses.⁵ The requirements for expungements vary from state to state, with some allowing expungements only for misdemeanor convictions, while others allowing expungement for any non-prison sentence. All states, however, require that the individual successfully comply with the terms of probation and all other court-ordered mandates.

In light of the above, we ask that you adopt language similar to the non-controversial provisions that currently exist in the Recognizing America's Children (RAC) Act, H.R.1468, which has over 30 Republican cosponsors.⁶ We ask that you replace the Dream Act's current expungement language with the following:

Treatment of Expunged Convictions.—For the purposes of cancellation of removal, adjustment to permanent resident status on a conditional basis, or other adjustment of status, the term "conviction" does not include an adjudication or judgment of guilt that has been dismissed, expunged, deferred, annulled, invalidated, withheld, sealed, vacated, pardoned, an order of probation without entry of judgment, or any similar rehabilitative disposition.

The Obama Administration, through Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA), began to address this disparity by allowing applicants with expunged convictions to apply for and receive DACA.⁷ Adopting the above language will ensure that the Dream Act does not subject these be eligible for cancellation of removal, adjustment to permanent resident status on a conditional basis, or other adjustment of status.").

same individuals—those who successfully obtained DACA with expunged convictions—to the whims of the Trump Administration and the potential for an overly stringent implementation of the Dream Act’s eligibility requirements.

Finally, in light of the substantial Republican support of the RAC Act and its criminal background provisions, we ask that you adopt the RAC Act’s requirement that, to be disqualified from relief under the misdemeanor bar, an applicant must have been imprisoned for an aggregate of more than one year, up from the Dream Act’s current requirement of 90 days.⁸ This change would allow a greater number of applicants to apply for relief under the Dream Act and reflects our nation’s commitment to rehabilitation, family unity, and the de-stigmatization of communities of color who have had contact with the criminal justice system.⁹ Moreover, even the SUCCEED Act, which represents the most conservative and narrow version of the Dream Act introduced in the 115th Congress, contains a similar, one-year misdemeanor bar.¹⁰

Thank you for your consideration of this request. If you have any questions, please contact Jose Magaña-Salgado at jmagana@ilrc.org or 202-777-8999.

⁸ Recognizing America’s Children Act, H.R.1468, 115th Cong. § 4(a)(E)(iv)(II) (2017).

⁹ We recommend the following, modified version of the RAC Act’s misdemeanor bar be included in the Dream Act of 2017: to be eligible, an applicant must “Not have been convicted of 3 or more offenses under Federal or State law, other than State offenses for which an essential element is the alien’s immigration status, for which the alien was convicted on different dates for each of the 3 offenses and imprisoned for an aggregate of more than 1 year.” This language incorporates the Dream Act and RAC Act’s requirement that an individual actually be imprisoned (e.g. excluding suspended sentences, which RAC accomplishes by collaterally stating that INA § 101(A)(48)(B) does not apply); the RAC Act’s requirement there must be an aggregate imprisonment of more than one year; and the Dream Act’s requirement that there be three or more separate offenses.
