

WHY ARE POLITICIANS REWRITING SOME OF LIFE'S MOST IMPORTANT LESSONS?

Congress has spent a half billion dollars trying to reach the MTV Generation with messages like, "No Sex Before Marriage." Yet, the government's own study found that when it comes to abstinence-only, there is "still no indication that these programs work." Now the President wants to spend another half billion on these ignorance-only programs.

LET'S GET REAL. Young people need honest and accurate information to protect themselves from unwanted pregnancy, sexually transmitted diseases, and AIDS. In fact, it's one point on which parents and teens can agree. A recent Kaiser Family Foundation survey found that 82% of parents and 88% of students want high schools to teach information about abstinence and contraception. Give teens the facts. Tell them the truth. After all, it's their lives on the line.

When it comes to sex ed, honesty is still the best policy.

Advocates for Youth, 1025 Vermont Avenue, Suite 200, Washington, DC 20005 • tel. 202.347.5700 • www.advocatesforyouth.org

American Civil Liberties Union, 1333 H Street N.W., 10th Floor, Washington, DC 20005 • tel. 202.544.1681 • www.aclu.org