

Watch Live NYC Mayor and NYPD commissioner hold press conference /

CBS News / CBS Evening News / CBS This Morning / 48 Hours / 60 Minutes / Sunday Morning / Face The Nation / CBSN

Log in Search

Video | US | World | Politics | Entertainment | Health | MoneyWatch | SciTech | Crime | Sports | Photos | More

Arlington - Help Desk Specialist

Our client, a multi-billion dollar, stable, growing co...

Apply Now

Rockville - Service Desk / Help Desk

DescriptionLet Medix guide you to success today!...

Apply Now

By BOOTIE COSGROVE-MATHER / CBS/AP / March 25, 2004, 5:19 PM

Teen Bomber Stopped At West Bank

image / AP

Comment / Shares / 1 Tweets / Stumble / Email

More +

The Palestinian teenager wore an oversized red jersey as he approached Israeli soldiers who had gotten a tip about a suicide bomber at a crowded checkpoint Wednesday. Suddenly the soldiers saw something bulge under his top.

The Israelis dashed behind concrete barricades, pointed their guns at the youth and ordered him to stop. On their instructions, he took off his jersey, revealing a bulky, gray bomb vest - and setting off a tense encounter captured in exclusive Associated Press Television News footage.

"He told us he didn't want to die. He didn't want to blow up," said Lt. Tamir Milrad.

Members of the al-Aqsa Martyrs' Brigades in the Balata refugee camp next to Nablus claimed responsibility for the latest in a series of foiled attacks on Israel by Palestinian youths. Al-Aqsa is loosely linked to Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement.

The family of the teenager, identified as Hussam Abdo, said he was gullible and easily manipulated.

"He doesn't know anything (about politics), and he has the intelligence of a 12 year old," said his brother, Hosni.

CBSN Live

Iran Referendum

Washington - DESKTOP SUPPORT SPECIALIST ...
Ref ID: 04510-142251Classification: Desktop S...

Apply Now

Rockville - Service Desk / Help Desk
DescriptionLet Medix guide you to success toda...

Apply Now

Falls Church - Help Desk Support Technician / D...
Mindbank Consulting Group currently has an ur...

Apply Now

Most Popular

- 01 U.K. couple facing $200,000 bill after baby born in NYC
61204 views
- 02 Jennifer Aniston cuts through all the paparazzi noise
57596 views
- 03 Cops: Tot accidentally shoots, kills mom in Idaho Walmart
46550 views
- 04 Stuart Scott, ESPN anchor, dies age 49
44896 views
- 05 NYPD officers again turn backs on mayor at cop's funeral
44467 views

Watch CBSN Live

Abdo, though 16, looked far younger, and the Israeli military initially said it believed he was 10. His family said he acted strangely Tuesday, giving candy to them and to neighbors and refusing to explain why.

Since the Israeli assassination of Hamas spiritual leader Sheik Ahmed Yassin on Monday, Israel has been on high alert. Hamas has killed hundreds of Israelis in suicide bombings and other attacks in recent years.

Wednesday's confrontation began about 4 p.m. when soldiers at the Hawara checkpoint outside Nablus received intelligence a bomber was there. They shut down the crossing and began searching hundreds of people there, the military said.

Suddenly Abdo, wearing the jersey, approached them.

"We saw that he had something under his shirt," Milrad said.

The soldiers, taking cover behind the barriers, sent a yellow army robot to bring scissors to the teenager so he could cut off the vest.

Abdo, visibly frightened and confused, cut off part of the vest and struggled with the rest. "I don't how to get this off," he said in frustration before successfully removing it.

Soldiers ordered him to take off his undershirt and pull down his jeans to make sure he had no other weapons. Then they arrested him.

Sappers blew up the vest, which the army said was an 18-pound bomb.

Abdo told the soldiers who caught him that someone gave him $23, a suicide bomber's vest, and then sent him to go kill Israelis, reported CBS News Correspondent David Hawkins.

"In addition to the fact that he would have harmed my soldiers, he would have also harmed the Palestinians waiting at the checkpoint, and there were 200 to 300 innocent Palestinians there," said the commander of the checkpoint, who identified himself only as Lt. Col. Guy.

Several teenagers have carried out suicide bombings over the past 3 1/2 years, and there has been recent concern that militant groups were turning to younger attackers to elude Israeli security checks.

On March 16, Israeli troops stopped an 11-year-old boy allegedly trying to smuggle explosives through the same checkpoint. Israel said militants had given the boy the explosives without his knowledge, either to ferry across the checkpoint or to be blown up by remote control when he got near soldiers.

Palestinians and the boy disputed this, claiming the bag he was carrying - which was blown up by army sappers - contained auto parts.

Last month, Israeli police arrested three boys, aged 12, 13 and 15, who said they were on their way to carry out a shooting attack in Israel.

"No matter how many times Israel learns of the use of children for suicide bombings, it is shocking on each occasion," said Dore Gold, an adviser to Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon. "Israelis do not understand how Palestinians are willing to sacrifice their own children in order to kill ours."

Many, if not most, Palestinians are also shocked by the use of children by terrorists -- but try to put it in context.

apple tv amazon fireTV Roku

CBSN
CBS News. Always On.

Introducing CBSN

Watch CBS News anytime, anywhere with the new 24/7 digital news network. Stream CBSN live or on demand for FREE on your TV, computer, tablet, or smartphone.

Watch Now

play VIDEO

Alive and Kickin', part one

Most Shared

Stuart Scott, ESPN anchor, dies age 49

Teddy Roosevelt's retreat

NYPD officers again turn backs on mayor at cop's funeral

Luke Burbank: CrossFit to be tied

Cleveland woman's death in custody ruled homicide

"As long as the Intifada is going on, as long as the incidents are escalating and the level of violence is escalating, we will have children who are ready to become martyrs, who are ready to become suicide bombers," Palestinian psychiatrist Dr. Iyad Zaout told Hawkins.

Physicians for Human Rights also condemned the militants' use of children, calling it "illegal and immoral."

After the incident Wednesday, the army brought out Abdo, who appeared shaken but defiant, to be photographed by the media.

Reporters were allowed only to ask his name, age and grade.

Maj. Sharon Feingold, an army spokeswoman, said reporters were not allowed to question the youth "for intelligence reasons." An inquiry was under way, she said, "to find out who sent this boy and why they did it. Naturally this is a monstrous doing of evil people, sending young children and turning them into human bombs. It's horrid and terribly worrisome."

Abdo's family said the teenager was not affiliated with any militant group, going to rallies for all of them and identifying with whichever one carried out the latest attack on Israelis.

On Tuesday, he got his hair cut in the style his mother, Tamam, likes and told her he would do anything she wants, she said.

"You never are like this," she said "What happened?"

"I just want you to be happy with me," he responded.

Abdo left his house Wednesday morning saying he was going to school, but never arrived there.

Hosni Abdo said he was furious with whoever persuaded his brother to strap on the bomb vest.

"The ones who sent him are stupid, because the army will give him two slaps and he will tell them who sent him," Hosni Abdo said.

© 2004 CBS Interactive Inc. All Rights Reserved. This material may not be published, broadcast, rewritten, or redistributed. The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Comment / Shares / 1 Tweets / Stumble / Email More +

Bootie Cosgrove-Mather Recommended

Ex-student poses naked for revenge, gets ticket

Dead body of 17-year-old found in Phoenix alley

Pennsylvania woman Gisele Paris convicted of euthanizing sick neighbor's dog

Bland lunches are a thing of the past

Jimmy Dean Sponsored

Learn more

Powered by

for Natalie

Featured in World

Popular on CBS News

11 PHOTOS

Animal count at the London

Most Discussed

Scalise: Suggestion he was involved with Duke group is "ludicrous"

1155 COMMENTS

NYPD officers again turn backs on mayor at cop's funeral

1101 COMMENTS

Cops: Tot accidentally shoots, kills mom in Idaho Walmart

966 COMMENTS

Mom killed by own gun described as loving, responsible

725 COMMENTS

GOP to target Obamacare when new Congress begins

680 COMMENTS

Washington - Help Desk Technician
Seeking a friendly, reliable, and highly motivate...

Apply Now

Washington - DESKTOP SUPPORT SPECIALIST ...
Ref ID: 04510-142251Classification: Desktop S...

Apply Now

Washington - Helpdesk Specialist
1435 - Help Desk Specialist Metro systems Inc, ...

Apply Now

Traditional New Year's food proves deadly again in Japan

Choking deaths are caused by one popular food every January in Japan, and 2015 was no exception

"Painful loss": A look at some passengers and crew on Flight 8501

Relatives and loved ones recall the stories of some of the 162 people aboard AirAsia Flight 8501

Flu season takes another turn for the worse

"Dude... Stop the spread, please"

Cosby becomes focus of "Celebrity Apprentice" premiere

2 prospects from U.S. ski team killed in avalanche in Austria

Who's voting against John Boehner for speaker of the House?

"Downton Abbey" season 5 premiere best moments

Climbers attempt the near-impossible in Yosemite

"Stripped naked and paraded on camera"

Comments

0 Comments / 1 person listening

SIGN IN

	+ FOLLOW	Share	POST COMMENT AS...

COMMENTING FAQs / GUIDELINES

NEWEST | OLDEST | TOP COMMENTS

CBSNews.com

Site Map
Help
Contact Us
CBS Bios

CBS Interactive

Privacy Policy
Terms of Use
Mobile User Agreement
About CBS

Follow Us

Facebook
Twitter
RSS
Email Newsletters

Copyright © 2015 CBS Interactive Inc.
All rights reserved.

Search...

1/5/2015

Teen Bomber Stopped At West Bank - CBS News

Careers

Advertise

YouTube

Internships

Closed Captioning

CBS Radio News

Development Programs

CBS Local