

National Threat Evaluation and Reporting Master Trainer Program

The National Threat Evaluation and Reporting (NTER) Master Trainer Program (MTP) allows homeland security partners to assist their communities in adapting to an evolving threat landscape. Utilizing a train-the-trainer model, the NTER MTP certifies Master Trainers in behavioral threat assessment techniques and best practices, primarily through the Instructor Development Threat Evaluation and Reporting Course (ID-TERC). Certified Master Trainers are equipped to empower homeland security partners in their communities to identify and assess warning signs, and manage potential threats of future, targeted violence regardless of motive.

The MTP will generate a network of Master Trainers to continue to teach threat assessment approaches to individuals throughout all levels of government who vet tips and leads and contribute to the safety and security of their communities.

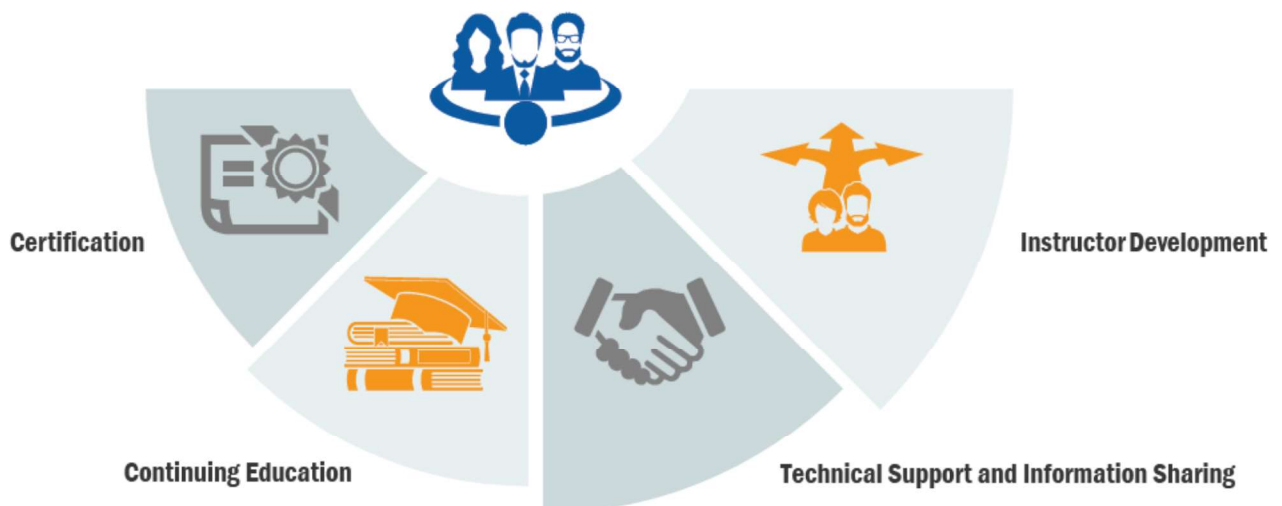

Minimum Requirements

- ✓ Current employee of a federal, state, local, tribal, or territorial (F/SLTT) homeland security partner
- ✓ Minimum of two years in a field related to public sector security or workplace/insider threat
- ✓ Nominated by a current program member, an NTER representative, or a leader from your agency

Preferred Qualifications

- ✓ Supervisory or senior employee of an F/SLTT agency
- ✓ Professional or academic experience in targeted violence prevention or behavioral threat assessment
- ✓ Professional experience in the vetting of tips and leads
- ✓ Certified Instructor/Trainer

Certified Master Trainers receive access to professional development in behavioral threat assessment and instruction techniques to include certification, technical support, and continuing education opportunities. These resources assist in training F/SLTT and private sector partners on building processes and conducting threat assessments on individuals who exhibit concerning behaviors.
