Below is a link to a national vehicle location service that is free for law enforcement (requires registration). It appears that the system works with tag readers and cameras and allows the user to query tags and map any hits returned by the system. The user manual is attached as well

You can access the NVLS service by visiting the following website:

(b)(7)e

About NVLS:

Vigilant Video Inc. ("Vigilant"), Locator Technologies, LLC ("Locator") and National Vehicle Service, NFPC (NVS), via NVLS, store and disseminate to law enforcement agencies public and privately gathered license plate recognition (LPR) data. The purpose of the project is to interface with Federal, State, Local Law Enforcement Agencies in the US and Canada to locate stolen and felony vehicles and to interface with the Center for Exploited and Missing Children and other like agencies to more efficiently resolve Amber Alert messages.

There is no cost to law enforcement to receive the base level access to the NVLS message system data. Law enforcement organizations are encouraged to participate by providing their LPR data in order for it to be shared with other law enforcement agencies within this nation-wide LPR initiative.

For Further Information:

If you would like to obtain further information about Project NVLS please feel free to contact me at any time. I am here to help you make this program work.

To learn more about how to acquire your own LPR equipment or manage LPR data, please contact Vigilant Video, the leader in LPR equipment and data management for US Law Enforcement Agencies. Email us at sales@vigilantvideo.com, visit our website at www.vigilantvideo.com or call 925-398-2079 to learn more about how to enhance public safety by using LPR technology.

Sincerely,

Has anyone at Main DHS been contacted regarding a LPR initiative? I think the folks who manage (b)(7)e (b)(7)e would be best positioned to advance this project.

I understand that your meetings as SDSU's Viz Center went well. We have been discussing some of the same applications with DHS Science and Technology and are scheduled to meet with them again on April 13. We would be interested to see if SDSU's program could also assist us.

Sorry to be a pain on this item, but I have folks from EPIC and DEA showing up tomorrow to tour the LESC and BCSC. Have we made any progress with OCIO on having the (b)(7)e software loaded to allow us (b)(7)e (b)(7)e We spoke to (b)(7)e again and they are ready to deploy (b)(7)e If we have a timeline, it could help us for the upcoming BCSC/EPIC meeting at OMB on April 12.

As a follow up to yesterday's discussion on LPRs we have been looking at LPR capability in concert with the BCSC.

In concert with the BCSC we are promoting (b)(7)e

(b)(7)e

A few private firms such as Vigilant Video (Check web site for additional information) currently compile this information into a database and offer access to their LPR database through a contract service. In addition, (b)(7)e is looking into making this data readily available as well on the (b)(7)e environment.

Due to the potential scale and cost we have been advocating that DHS should take an active role in coordinating and making available LPR data through (b)(7)e since this type of data has a direct impact on protecting the homeland.
