

What kind of set up were you considering?
Do you use Skype or just a conference
call?

Best, Greg

Dear Greg,

Thank you so much for your assistance

a video conference with the panel referenced below? Thanks,

Lauren

If you make your way to Boston let me know. Cambridge Police Commissioner Robert Haas is a friend and someone who works closely with the mental health community on CVE relate issues. My team and I authored one of the Boston bombing afteraction reports that focused on Cambridge outreach activities.

Dear Vanessa,

Thank you so much. We met at TEDxBoston a couple of years ago and am grateful for your help on this important component of CVE.

Dear Greg,

It is a pleasure to e-meet you. We are so excited by your email and really appreciate your help. The mental health component to this issue of adolescent minds, radicalization and belonging has not been incorporated into the issue as fully as it needs to be and we would really benefit from the expertise you and your colleagues can bring. Thank you.

We look forward to talking very soon!

Kind Regards,
Farah

Thank you Vanessa for making this introduction, and Greg very nice to meet you. I am copying our co chairs Farah Pandith and Adnan Kifayat who I know will want to chime in on exactly what would be helpful. The short answer though is that yes we would love your help in putting together a panel. Lauren Wenger who is also copied here can help with scheduling on our side. Most of us are in Washington but I am sure we could either travel or set up a video conference. Does that sound workable?

Hi Vanessa,

Good to hear from you. I met with David Bangsberg recently and got an update on CGH and heard about all the wonderful things you are accomplishing with Seed Global Health. You must be very busy with everything and congratulations on getting your program to such a solid place in such a short time.

Thank you for thinking of me with regard to this important issue. I think there are several psychiatrists here who are interested in this vulnerability and its ramifications and I'm glad there are people like Ms

Morgenthau
who are focusing attention on this aspect of the problem.

I'd be happy to put together a team of us who could respond
to her request:

Gene Beresin--- Child and Adolescent Psychiatrist and Professor and Executive Director of the new Clay
Center for Young Healthy
Minds. He is interested in
how the media
is being used for good and ill
with regard to mind, brain and behavior in young people.

Ron Schouten--
-Psychiatrist
and Attorney and Director of our Law and Psychiatry
Program. I believe he regularly consults with
the FBI on risk assessment.

John Herman---
Associate Chief
of Psychiatry

and liaison with the US State Department
having directed 2 training
programs in mental health
for State Department
staff as you probably know.

Greg
Fricchione---
Associate Chief,
Director of Global Psychiatry and
Prof., Experience in Middle East and Africa with mental health
programming
and also
interested in the role of disconnection challenges and
in-group/out-
group dynamics
in the development of faulty decision-making.

I'm sure I can speak for them
that we'd be happy to help in any way we can.

Thanks again
Vanessa.

Best,

On the DHS front, among other things, I am working with a group of policy makers on countering violent extremism. One of our focus areas is how to incorporate the education and mental health sectors into the countering violent extremism discussion. We were hoping to talk to someone at Mass General who is well versed in the architecture of the child/adolescent mind and has thoughts about it vis a vis gangs, cults, drugs etc. We are of course interested in what sort of adolescent brain may be more of a likely target for radicalization and what are the early indicators that this may happen. I have attached our subcommittee roster and a document explaining who we are and what we are focusing on for background. In the meantime, I would be grateful for any recommendation you may have for someone who is spending some significant time thinking about these issues.
