On behalf of the Office of University of Programs, Science & Technology Directorate, I invite you to attend a brief by the DHS Center of Excellence (COE) National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and Responses to Terrorism (START) researchers on the project titled “Profiles of Individual Radicalization in the United States (PIRUS)”. The START researchers, Dr. Michael Jensen and Mr. Patrick James will share their preliminary findings. Additional details provided below.

Space is LIMITED, so please RSVP to me (via email) by noon on Monday, June 29 and indicate if you will be attending in person or via conference call.

Title: Profiles of Individual Radicalization in the United States (PIRUS)

Date: Tuesday June 30th

Time: 10:00-11:30am

Address: Room 5-212, 1120 Vermont Avenue, NW

Conference Bridge: Dial: 1-800-320-4330. Conference Pin: 119832

Project Description: This project attempts to dramatically advance the empirical basis for understanding domestic radicalization. Using public sources, the project collects datasets of attributes for individuals indicted in the United States for violent and non-violent radical crimes, divided between the Islamist, Far Left and Far Right milieus, detailed qualitative case studies of the life-course histories and quantitative radicalization trajectories of approximately 110 violent and non-violent radicals across these milieus. Preliminary findings from START’s Profiles of Individual Radicalization in the United States (PIRUS) project highlight interesting and policy-relevant trends among individuals radicalized in the United States since World War II. These findings validate some elements of common wisdom regarding this phenomenon, while also revealing interesting new insights.

Presenters: START researchers, Dr. Michael Jensen and Mr. Patrick James
