Ok, I'll let you know what happens. Haven't heard anything yet. Its time to hold our ground. We have a sound approach, and we have a clear statutory responsibility for counterterrorism.

Yes – that is odd indeed. I just came from a WH meeting where [redacted] is attending. No doubt that is where he heard the news.

But – they may be referring to the e-mail I sent about the architecture issues. I sent to several people. No one has responded other than [redacted] who just a few minutes ago said that eGuardian had been invited numerous times to the Architecture meetings. I had assigned [redacted] because the title of the WG seemed broader than just SARs, and so took responsibility but [redacted] said that eGuardian was invited several times. I told him I appreciated that, and that I am just tired of us having to constantly defend ourselves against silly questions. He agreed.

So everyone is going to ignore the reality of the situation.

Am leaving soon – let me know by BB what he has to say if you do talk!

Also, for the record, last night [redacted] and I had agreed on language for the white paper we did on N-DEX/SARs. So this morning he wants me to delete a sentence – that he wrote. I bet anything that he sent it to [redacted] I haven't decided whether to delete it or not.

FYI - I guess word of our web services concept has made it to PM-ISE and BJA. Not sure why its disturbing that we will offer additional capability and services to our customers.

Heard some very disturbing information about the latest development beginning at eGuarian.

In a meeting now, but would like to talk today.
