You were both copied on this email and it answers the questions that were mentioned in our email exchange last night. As you can see from [REDACTED] response the LEO/eGuardian "configuration only needs to be set up if the files are going to be pushed into their production environment.

Now you should have the email I sent to the SS participants and the process as discussed with eGuardian. Let's talk on what we are going to do on our side to make this happen.

Yes that is exactly what I'm proposing. This is to address earlier discussions we had about only have test data as test for the ingest process. By having these come to you we can verify this mechanism and then will advise all the locations that this operation has been tested and ready for use.

As for your point on having the LEO account, I have already instructed our tech team to reach out to each of the shared space locations and verify they have an account and then to proceed in setting up the logistics with your shop.

Once all these elements have been completed it will then be up to the shared space locations to decide what they will send to you. I also plan to have a discussion with [REDACTED] on the process. What I saw in the email chain with Miami Dade was not what we discussed originally.
