

The Making of a Terrorist: Recruitment, Training and Root Causes (3 volumes)
Edited by Dr. James JF Forest
(Westport, CT: Praeger Publishers, 2005)

The chapters of this publication revolve around one central question: What do we currently know about the transformation through which an individual becomes a terrorist? Chapters in the first volume cover central themes in the recruitment of terrorists, with special emphasis on the psychological and religious appeals of joining a terrorist organization. The second volume provides a variety of insights on the training of terrorists (both how and where), and describe these actions in the context of specific terrorist groups. Contributors to the third volume focus on the political, social, and economic factors that contribute to terrorism both globally and within specific countries or regions.
