Subject: Updated Public Diplomacy and Messaging Framework to Counter Boko Haram

Colleagues,

Since (some of us) last met at the State Department to discuss public diplomacy outreach and messaging related to Boko Haram, a lot has changed in Nigeria, as you know. Much has also changed for me – I've transitioned from the Public Affairs bureau to work full time on CVE/CT messaging in the Interagency Center for Strategic Counterterrorism Communications (R/CSCC), located at State.

Attached are two documents that draw on your direct input, both in terms of strategy and programming. They are not meant to be definitive, fixed guides, but rather living documents to help us consider next steps as the situation continues to evolve. What is significant about this Framework is that it has been carefully reviewed by Embassy Abuja and thus represents their perceptions and understanding of the situation and Nigeria's needs as much as our own.

Special Envoy for Strategic CT Communications Rashad Hussain, Deputy Coordinator for CSCC Outreach Stevie Hamilton and I will be in Nigeria next week to meet with civil society, religious and government leaders to explore ways that we can be supportive. I welcome your thoughts – and I apologize for sending this late Friday!

I'll be in touch after we return to share what we've learned.

Best,

[REDACTED]
