 SUBJECT: PAKISTAN MEDIA REACTION: JANUARY 15, 2010

Summary: Coverage of a drone strike that killed several militants in South Waziristan dominated front pages this morning. Several newspapers reported rumors that Chief of Tahrik-i-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) Hakimullah Mehsud may be among those killed in the attack, simultaneously carrying the TTP's statement that Mehsud is "alive, safe and traveling." Prime Minister Gilani's address to the National Assembly was also featured in today's headlines. The Prime Minister condemned new U.S. screening measures as "humiliating and against [Pakistan's] self respect," and stated that the U.S. cannot win in Afghanistan without Pakistan's support. Dailies also highlighted the Prime Minister's call for the U.S. to end drone strikes and increase trade opportunities for Pakistan. Media also reported opposition leader, Chaudhry Nisar Ali's statement that "no official delegation from Pakistan should visit the U.S. unless screening goes." U.S. Special Envoy Holbrooke's Pakistan visit continued to garner media coverage for the second consecutive day. His trip to Swat valley and meeting with Pakistan Army Chief General Kayani were highlighted in nearly all major dailies, and his praise for the people of Swat and the Pakistan Army received extensive coverage. "Dawn" reported that, "according to a senior Finance Ministry official," delays in Kerry-Lugar disbursements are caused by "lack of coordination between U.S. administration officials." Newspapers also reported Defense Minister Mukhtar's statement that American forces used several bases in Pakistan for overt and covert operations inside Afghanistan, but that the U.S. has now vacated all airbases including Shamsi Airbase in Balochistan. Senator Carl Levin's comments that Pakistani leaders privately back drone strikes while publicly denouncing them continued to receive coverage. Urdu daily, "Express," carried the U.S. Embassy's clarification that the "U.S. is not pressuring Pakistan to abandon the Iran gas pipeline project." The day's editorials echoed several themes raised in Prime Minister Gilani's address to the National Assembly: respect for Pakistan ("Nisar's Passion, Gilani's Pragmatism, Nation's Disappointment" in "The News"); U.S. assistance and Pakistani sovereignty ("Friends, Masters, and Bullies" in "The Daily Times"); and Pakistan's role in the U.S. strategy for Afghanistan ("The 'Do More' Mantra" in "The Business Recorder"). Continuing the condemnation of U.S. screening measures, Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" published a paranoid description of the security procedures in an editorial entitled "U.S. Leader Richard Holbrooke's Lie." End Summary.

'No U.S. planes were now flying from Shamsi, Jacobabad and Pasni,' the Minister said."

News Story: Lack Of Coordination Delaying Kerry-Lugar Funds -

"Lack of coordination among the authorities concerned in Pakistan and the United States is delaying the disbursement of funds under the Kerry Lugar Law (KLL). Although the law was passed by the U.S. Senate on Sept 24, progress on implementation has been slow, sources in the finance ministry told 'Dawn.'... According to a senior Finance Ministry official, the main hurdle for the approval of projects was lack of coordination between U.S. administration officials. 'Robin Raphael, David Lipton and Richard Holbrooke have different approaches about allocation of funds,' the officials said. Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. Envoy for Afghanistan and Pakistan, supports the idea of executing all projects through the NGO sector in Pakistan."

In a conference call with reporters from Dubai, Senator Carl Levin scolded Pakistan's leaders for privately supporting U.S. drone strikes while publicly denouncing them. 'What troubles me is the public attack on these drone attacks,' he said. 'While at the same time they've privately obviously not told us that we must stop,' Chairman of the U.S. Senate Armed Services Committee said."

Petroleum Wednesday, American officials threatened to end support for Pakistan's electricity projects and end assistance to facilitate the importation of liquefied natural gas (LNG) if Pakistan proceeds with a planned pipeline project with Iran. EDITORIALS/OPINIONS

"While one would not doubt that Foreign Minister Qureshi discussed with U.S. Special Envoy Holbrooke some clear 'red lines' in the American-Pakistan relations, it is evident that his interlocutor treated them with little respect.... It should be obvious to the government that things would not change unless it puts its foot down to make the U.S. realize how the 'key ally' in the war on terror ought to be treated.... We must not be duped by the declaration of a billion dollar of help in the execution of energy projects; the quid pro quo should be simply unacceptable. It is to sacrifice the Iranian gas pipeline project, as reportedly Mr. Holbrooke demanded at the time of making the offer of assistance."

Editorial: Holbrooke Accosted, an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English language daily "Daily Times" (cir. 10,000) (01/15)

"U.S. Special Envoy Richard Holbrooke seems to be having a torrid time in Pakistan. This comes as no surprise to us since reservations and even anti-U.S. feeling are growing throughout the country. The government, whatever its real views, seems also to feel the need to placate angry public opinion by taking a tougher stance against U.S. policies to visiting American dignitaries.... The issues that glue together the tenuous alliance between Pakistan and the U.S. are negated by the issues that divide them. The unstated difference that is the subtext of all diplomatic engagements between the two sides is the contradiction at the heart of Pakistan's policy of supporting the Afghan Taliban, or at the very least turning a blind eye to their activities from Pakistani soil, while initiating military campaigns to crush their Pakistani ENCLASSED Both Washington and Islamabad need to address this invisible 'gulf' honestly if the alliance is to endure."

Editorial: Ambassador Holbrooke's Rebuff To Foreign Minister Qureshi, an editorial in the popular rightist Urdu-language daily "Ausaf" (cir. 10,000) (01/15)

"Responding to Foreign Minister Shah Mehmood Qureshi's demand that the U.S. must repeal the enhanced screening procedure for Pakistani citizens at its airports, Ambassador Richard Holbrooke said that he himself undergoes this procedure, therefore Pakistanis cannot be exempted from these rule. But this flat refusal failed to constrain Mr. Qureshi to feel any qualms. Let aside the foreign minister, everybody knows how the U.S. responds to the statements of our president and prime minister in which they demand Washington to stop the drone attacks. Is it possible for the financial largesse and self-respect to go side by side?"

Editorial: U.S. Leader Richard Holbrooke's Lie, an editorial in the second-largest, nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 150,000) (01/15)

"There is a difference between screening and strip search. The travelers coming to America from 14 countries including Pakistan are subjected to stripped inspection at American airports. People coming from America tell that passengers from Pakistan are specifically stripped naked and made to sit in a special room for hours. American inspectors come to the room after many hours to ask humiliating questions.... Holbrooke tried to be evasive by describing the humiliating strip search as screening; he in fact lied as per American tradition."

Editorial: The 'Do More' Mantra, an editorial in the country's premier business newspaper, "Business Recorder" (cir. 25,000) (01/15)

"Speaking to the CNN upon their return home from last week's visit to Pakistan, Senators Joe Lieberman and John McCain expressed satisfaction over Pakistan's commitment to the war against terrorists. Lieberman, who is also Chairman of the Senate Committee on Homeland Security, said that Pakistan is a full-partner in the war on terrorism. And that Pakistanis are beginning to understand the U.S. position that the Pakistani and Afghan Taliban are inter-linked; and to defeat one, it is also important to fight the other. As expected, the Senator did not merely show appreciation he also made the usual 'do more' demand. He was more circumspect, though, in making the demand as he said 'there's a possibility that we'll see some more movement in North Waziristan.'"

Editorial: The Taliban, an editorial in the Karachi-based center-left independent national English daily "Dawn" (cir. 55,000) (01/15)

"Clearly, the Americans have extended some cooperation to Pakistan in the fight against the TTP: Baitullah Mehsud was killed in a drone strike, military equipment was rushed to Pakistan to aid its counter-insurgency operations over the last year and aerial surveillance has been shared. The problem though is the way the Americans and the Pakistani sides approach the Taliban problem: each is obsessed with only part of the Taliban 'spectrum' and looks at the rest as incidental to its concerns. But the distinctions are artificial and meaningless in many respects - there are only Taliban, and they need to be defeated."

Editorial: Pakistan Is Not Ignoring Its Defense, an editorial in the Lahore-based populist center-right Urdu daily "Khabrain" (cir. 50,000) (1/15)

"While chairing a meeting of the National Command Authority, Prime Minister Syed Yousuf Raza Gillani has said that Pakistan is a nuclear power. He added that there will be dangerous consequences if India engages in any adventurism.... The fact is that some powers are prodding India towards adventurism against Pakistan. India must act wisely and understand the ground reality. Instead of being used by another power, India should hold its national interests paramount."

Editorial: PM's Timely Warning To India: India Will Be Responsible For Devastation Caused By The Nuclear Bomb, an editorial in the second-largest, nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 150,000) (01/15)

"Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani has said that India should not go for an adventure with Pakistan, for it would be dangerous for India.... Prime Minister Gilani has rightly made it clear to India that any adventure with nuclear Pakistan could prove to be very costly for India."

Editorial: Pakistan's Timely Warning To India, an editorial in the center-right Urdu daily "Pakistan" (cir. 10,000) (01/15)

"Pakistan has rightly made clear Pakistan's strategy for peace in comparison to India's war mongering. Now we have to see what help our war on terror 'companion' America offers to Pakistan and how does it stop India from nurturing war ambitions."

Opinion: Nisar's Passion, Gilani's Pragmatism, Nation's Disappointment, an op-ed by Mohammad Malick in the populist, often

UNCLASSIFIED

"It was a good suggestion by Nisar that for starters unless U.S. reviewed this decision all parliamentary visits to United States should be stopped. A similar view was also expressed by Senator Mushahid and MNA Ahsan Iqbal on Tuesday eve in Geo's weekly program 'Kehnay may kya hurj hai' (there is no harm in saying this).... In his latest visit, a somewhat sincere sounding Ambassador Holbrooke was repeatedly heard asking people about the causes of growing American unpopularity despite all that America was doing in this area. The answer is misleadingly simple actually and one also spelled out later by the Prime Minister when he advised the Americans to concentrate on giving more respect to the people and the country, instead of relying on the factor of increasing financial assistance."

Opinion: Friends, Masters And Bullies, an op-ed by Zafar Hilaly in the Lahore-based liberal English language daily "Daily Times" (cir. 10,000) (01/15)

"Friend, master or bully, Pakistan's establishment is ever welcoming of U.S. assistance. This suits our psyche. We have always sought to gratify our desires with the least exertion. This accounts somewhat for our lack of success economically.... Hence, today our dependence on the U.S. assistance is well nigh total. Military assistance, the Kerry Lugar handout, U.S.-solicited help in the form of IMF bailouts and access to the U.S. market and - at the US's urging - that of the EU, is what is keeping Pakistan's economy afloat.... Nor does the US influence stop at the economy. In our internal affairs too the U.S. has primacy. Holbrooke assumed as much when he said last week that if necessary, the U.S. would be happy to play a role in bringing about better understanding between rival political forces within the country. And it takes only a cursory knowledge of our political set-up to realize that all major parties - including the armed forces, which are the largest political party in the country - are decisively swayed by American desires.... Obama is far too busy trying to prove that he is not a wimp to act as a statesman. However, had Pakistan spelt out the terms for its cooperation, a great deal of the political pressure on the government not to toe the disastrous U.S. policy of continuing to expand the war would have abated.... Instead, our lack of a coherent policy suggests that given sufficient American pressure Pakistan will assuredly relent; and that whatever we may say about U.S. incursions into Pak territory, we are malleable. All of this bodes ill for the future and, worse, confuses the public what precisely is the government's position."

Opinion: Peace, But Only With Honor, an op-ed by M.A. Niazi in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (01/15)

UNCLASSIFIED

"The peace moves have to be seen in the context of an overwhelming U.S. desire to end disputes between the two countries on any basis that would satisfy India, which is supposed to be the United States' main counterweight to China in the region. The U.S. does not grasp that the Indian establishment wants to achieve the freedom of action that is supposed to come with great-power status, and does not want the U.S. tutelage beyond a certain point. Be that as it may, the U.S. wants Pakistan to settle its disputes with India, on Indian terms if necessary.... However, if it rubberstamps an unjust solution cobbled together in New Delhi and approved in Washington, with no input from Muzaffarabad or Srinagar, it will not solve the problem, but merely provide the grounds for another grievance."

Opinion: Obama's Rhetoric And Reality, an op-ed by Aijaz Zaka Syed in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (01/15)

"America's wars and empire project seem to be expanding under its Nobel laureate president. While Iraq and Afghanistan are still burning and Pakistan is hurtling down the precipice, the hawks at Pentagon and Capitol Hill are sharpening their claws for Yemen and Somalia.... Unfortunately, what's happening today in Iraq, Afghanistan and Pakistan and the rest of the Muslim world is happening on Obama's watch. He may not like it but it's past time he took responsibility for America's policies and actions. We cannot go on blaming everything on Bush, especially when he isn't around. Will this ever change? As Obama completes one year in White House next week, it is time for him to think long and hard where the U.S. and the world are headed under his leadership. However, it's still not over yet. He can still take charge of his administration and free it from the oppressive legacy he's inherited. Obama can still lead the world to the dawn of hope and peace that he once promised us."
