Hi Jeff and Scot,

Would you please coordinate with Desi to work on this with ID.me?

I am still trying to get a business contact to assist as well.

Thanks,
Martin

Someone want to schedule a time for a tech to work with ID.me to see how this should work?

According to them, it should work without a “smartphone”, but it does need a cellphone or landline...

OK, we'll keep digging.

It looked like all the two factor options required a phone, but we might be missing something...

Hi Desi-

They can do this entirely on a computer with a webcam; no smartphone required.

Hi Desi,
Happy to help out here. My initial reaction was to think it's a local firewall that is blocking access to ID.me. It could also be a browser issue blocking access to the camera on the computer. A few items that would help if you do manage to speak with someone who experienced the error.

What step were they on? Screenshot of the screen prior to the error and the error message.
The URL of the error message is extremely helpful.
What browser were they using?
The email address of the individual attempting the selfie.

Unfortunately the only way to test the webcam selfie process is in production. Our sandbox environment is designed to imitate the process but not actually complete the API calls.

In response to your question you just sent, Yes, we use iproov.me for our Liveness video selfie component.

We are trying to track down someone in one of our remote offices who got the error, but not having much luck on our side..
Submitting a problem report is easy, but submitting one with actual screenshots and error message details?? ;-)

Hey Desi-

Is the firewall message from OED or ID.me? I suspect it might be an Oregon setting...

We started trying to have a computer set up in our remote offices for the public to use for this.

We are getting reports of a "firewall message" when trying to submit a selfie...

We are trying to figure out what that means....

Is there any way we can test that ourselves (some test link) or something?

Thoughts?

Thanx!
