Hi there, question about id.me if you can get back to me before 11:45am! (They are doing an interview with Keaton at KATU at 12pm.) Context below:

I've been in touch with the folks at id.me -- Keaton at KATU has reached out to them for added comment for his upcoming story about fraud.

The id.me folks confirmed the messaging they use when doing interview -- high level only, no state was prepared for the level of fraud, etc. etc. They are not going to proactively mention OED or a contract with us. They did offer this though, in the event that he asks about a contract, and I want to get a gut check from you, as to whether we're ok with it (since we haven't yet talked about our plan for pushing this out publicly):

We've had media interviews in the past in states where we were still in the contract process, and when asked about it Blake has responded with "X agency is aware of our services and offerings." Is this response OK if Blake is explicitly asked about OED? Want to make sure we discuss this before heading into the interview.

Please let me know what you think -- thank you!

Hi OED Team,

I know we're still in contract and do not have anything signed yet, but wanted to bring the following to your attention after our discussion about press, yesterday.

ID.me has been in a lot of news stories recently (NY Times, LA Times, CNBC, MSNBC, etc), so a lot of local entities have been reaching out. We just had a reporter from ABC 2/KATU in Portland, Keaton Thomas, reach out--they are working on a story related to unemployment fraud and have seen ID.me referenced in a few articles. He specifically asked: "Is there someone with your company I could talk to about the threats states are facing when it comes to fraudulent unemployment claims and whether or not states were prepared for the level of fraud we've seen since the pandemic?"

He's running the story on Monday regardless, but I wanted to bring this to your attention as it does not mention OED and we would not mention the relationship, but we wanted to touch base with you prior. I don't know who leads the comms/Public Affairs team but wanted to pass this along!

Thank you,

Mere Work
