1 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on November 17, 2017, at 9 a.m., Defendant the United 2 States Department of Justice (“Justice Department” or “DOJ”) will move, and hereby does move, 3 for summary judgment pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56.

4 SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

5 At issue in this case are two memoranda written by DOJ attorneys that Plaintiffs seek to 6 require the Justice Department to release under the Freedom of Information Act (“FOIA”), 5 7 U.S.C. § 552. These memoranda, however, were written to provide legal analysis and strategic 8 considerations to other DOJ attorneys for use in future litigation. As recently held by both the 9 D.C. Circuit and the Southern District of New York, such memoranda providing litigation 10 guidance constitute attorney work product because they are prepared in anticipation of litigation 11 and reflect attorneys’ litigation strategies and legal theories. National Association of Criminal 12 Defense Lawyers (“NACDL”) v. Department of Justice, 844 F.3d 246 (D.C. Cir. 2016); ACLU v.
13 DOJ, 210 F. Supp. 3d 467, 482–83 (S.D.N.Y. 2016); see also United States v. Richey, 632 F.3d
14 559, 567 (9th Cir. 2011) (setting out work product standard). Thus, the Justice Department 15 properly withheld these memoranda in full as attorney work product under FOIA Exemption 5, 5 16 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). These memoranda also reflect legal advice given by DOJ attorneys to their 17 clients, and thus were properly withheld in full under Exemption 5 as protected by the attorney-18 client privilege. See United States v. Jicarilla Apache Nation, 564 U.S. 162, 169–70 (2011) 19 (holding privilege applies to communications between Government attorneys and their clients).
20 Because the Justice Department properly withheld these documents and Plaintiffs are not 21 challenging the adequacy of its FOIA search, the Justice Department has fulfilled its FOIA 22 obligations, the Court should grant summary judgment to it on all claims.

23 STATEMENT OF ISSUES

24 1. Whether the Justice Department properly withheld in full two related memoranda 25 in which Justice Department attorneys present legal analysis and suggest litigation strategy under 26 FOIA Exemption 5 as attorney work product?<sup>1</sup>

27
28 <sup>1</sup> Of course, if the Court determines that the documents were properly withheld in full as attorney work product (or attorney-client communication), it need not reach the other issue.

1 2. Whether the Justice Department properly withheld these memoranda in full under 2 FOIA Exemption 5 as attorney-client communication?

3 STATEMENT OF FACTS

4 Plaintiffs seek to compel the release of two related attorney-authored documents: (1) an 5 internal Justice Department memorandum entitled “Determining Whether Evidence Is ‘Derived 6 from’ Surveillance under Title III or FISA” (“the FISA Memo”), and (2) and a two-page cover 7 memorandum to the FISA Memo, dated November 23, 2016 (“the Cover Memo”), which 8 summarizes the purpose and content of the FISA Memo. See Ex. 1, Declaration of Susan L. Kim 9 (“Kim Decl.”) ¶¶ 3–7. In these two memoranda, Justice Department attorneys describe relevant 10 legal frameworks and provide strategic considerations to help litigating Justice Department 11 attorneys assess whether evidence related to electronic surveillance is “derived from” that 12 surveillance within the meaning of Title III of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Acts 13 of 1968, 18 U.S.C. § 2510 et seq. (“Title III”), and the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 14 1978 (“FISA”), 50 U.S.C. § 1801 et seq., for purposes of complying with statutory notice 15 obligations. Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–7.

16 Title III and FISA both authorize the Government to conduct certain forms of electronic 17 surveillance under certain circumstances. See 18 U.S.C. §§ 2516, 2518(3)–(5); 50 U.S.C.
18 §§ 1805(a), 1824(a), 1842(d). And both Title III and FISA allow evidence obtained or “derived 19 from” such surveillance to be used in legal proceedings if certain conditions are met. See 18
20 U.S.C. § 2518(9); 50 U.S.C. § 1806(c). In particular, although the details differ between Title III
21 and FISA, both require the Government to provide notice of the surveillance to certain persons—22 generally criminal defendants—before evidence obtained or “derived from” Government 23 electronic surveillance may be used in trial or other such proceedings. See 18 U.S.C. § 2518(9); 24 50 U.S.C. § 1806(c). Consequently, in cases in which the Government has conducted related 25 electronic surveillance, federal prosecutors and other Justice Department attorneys may be 26 required to determine whether evidence on which they intend to rely was in any respect “derived 27 from” the electronic surveillance, in order to know whether they are required to provide notice of 28 that surveillance to litigants.

1 In the FISA Memo and Cover Memo, senior Justice Department attorneys attempt to 2 assist other Justice Department attorneys with making this determination, i.e., with determining 3 whether evidence in a case was “derived from” electronic surveillance under Title III or FISA 4 such that notice must be provided in litigation, and provide related legal and strategic 5 observations about such cases. Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–7, 10. Neither the Cover Memo nor the FISA 6 Memo purport to be making policy regarding how Justice Department attorneys must act when 7 faced with particular “derived from” determinations. Id. ¶ 7. To the contrary, the Cover Memo
8 explicitly states that the FISA Memo is not intended to provide comprehensive guidance 9 regarding Title III or FISA, but rather to provide an overview of relevant legal and strategic 10 considerations for attorneys’ use. Id. As stated in the Cover Memo, the FISA Memo is to be 11 used as a starting point for determinations of whether information is “derived from” surveillance, 12 to be supplemented by attorneys’ own updated legal research and consultation with Justice 13 Department attorneys knowledgeable about such matters. Id. Indeed, rather than a final 14 statement of policy, the FISA Memo, as described by the Cover Memo, was designed to facilitate 15 further discussion of these issues within the Justice Department and may be updated in the 16 future. Id.

17 The Cover Memo is two pages long and dated November 23, 2016. Id. ¶ 4. It is 18 addressed to “all federal prosecutors” from the chiefs of the Appellate Section of the DOJ 19 Criminal Division and the Appellate Unit of the DOJ National Security Division. Id. It is 20 marked “privileged and confidential.” Id. Its subject line is “Determining Whether Evidence Is 21 ‘Derived from’ Surveillance under Title III or FISA,” i.e., the title of the attached FISA Memo.
22 Id. In a series of paragraphs, the Cover Memo summarizes the subject, content, and purpose of 23 the FISA Memo, and comments more broadly on the Justice Department’s efforts to ensure 24 compliance with the law in this area. Id.

25 The FISA Memo was originally attached to the Cover Memo. Id. ¶ 3. It is thirty-two 26 pages (or thirty-one without the title page), and each page is marked “Attorney Work Product” 27 and “For Official Use Only.” Id. ¶ 5. It is dated “November 2016,” and was written by a group 28 of Justice Department attorneys. Id. ¶¶ 5–6. It consists of four sections—an introduction

1 summarizing the purpose of the memorandum, a table of contents, a summary of conclusions, 2 and a section of legal analysis. Id. ¶ 5. The legal analysis section constitutes the vast majority of 3 the document, and is divided into a number of subsections based on the legal issue under 4 discussion. Id. The FISA Memo thus consists primarily of a legal analysis of Title III, FISA, 5 and relevant caselaw, including conclusions regarding the present state of the law on when 6 evidence is “derived from” electronic surveillance under Title III and FISA. Id. The FISA 7 Memo cautions, however, that it is simply setting forth the basic law and legal frameworks at 8 issue, and that courts could conceivably disagree with the FISA Memo’s conclusions in some 9 contexts. Id. ¶ 7. In light of this, the FISA Memo encourages Justice Department attorneys to 10 seek further guidance from knowledgeable attorneys within the Department, especially when 11 encountering difficult questions. Id. Interwoven throughout this legal analysis are various 12 strategic considerations for litigation—generally, what steps Justice Department attorneys should 13 take to ensure they are complying with the relevant law and what legal arguments and litigation 14 approaches have the greatest chance of success in light of the law in this area. Id. ¶ 5.

15 On February 6, 2017, Plaintiffs submitted a FOIA request to the Justice Department 16 seeking the FISA Memo; any cover letter or any document attached to the FISA Memo; any 17 other version of the FISA Memo created or distributed on or after November 23, 2016; and any 18 documents “modifying, supplementing, superseding, or rescinding” the FISA Memo. Id. ¶ 2.
19 The DOJ National Security Division responded on behalf of the Justice Department on February 20 10, 2017. Id. ¶ 3. The National Security Division indicated that it had conducted a search for 21 records responsive to Plaintiffs’ FOIA request, and had located two responsive records, the FISA 22 Memo and the Cover Memo, both of which it was withholding in full pursuant to Exemption 5.
23 Id. Plaintiffs administratively appealed, and their appeal was denied. Id.

24 Plaintiffs’ filed this lawsuit on June 21, 2017, seeking to compel the disclosure of the 25 FISA Memo and the Cover Memo. See Compl., ECF No. 1. Plaintiffs are not challenging the 26 adequacy of the Justice Department’s search for records responsive to their FOIA request. Int.
27 Case Management Statement, ECF No. 23, ¶ 15. Thus, the only matter to be decided in this case 28

1 is whether the Justice Department properly withheld the FISA Memo and Cover Memo under 2 FOIA.

3 ARGUMENT

4 FOIA entitles the Government to withhold attorney-authored memoranda setting forth 5 legal analysis and strategic considerations for use by Government attorneys in litigation, as 6 recently reaffirmed by the D.C. Circuit and the Southern District of New York. Requiring the 7 disclosure of such documents would prevent the free flow of legal guidance within the 8 Government, undermining the Government's effort both to fulfill its legal obligations and 9 litigate cases. The Justice Department thus properly withheld in full the two memoranda at issue 10 in this case, and summary judgment should be granted in its favor.

11 FOIA's "basic purpose" reflects a "general philosophy of full agency disclosure unless 12 information is exempted under clearly delineated statutory language." John Doe Agency v. John 13 Doe Corp., 493 U.S. 146, 152 (1989). "Congress recognized, however, that public disclosure is 14 not always in the public interest[.]" CIA v. Sims, 471 U.S. 159, 166–67 (1985). Thus, in passing 15 FOIA, "Congress sought 'to reach a workable balance between the right of the public to know
16 and the need of the Government to keep information in confidence to the extent necessary 17 without permitting indiscriminate secrecy.'" John Doe, 493 U.S. at 152 (citation omitted).

18 To that end, FOIA does not require disclosure of Government records that fall within 19 one of nine enumerated exceptions. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). "A district court only has 20 jurisdiction to compel an agency to disclose improperly withheld agency records," i.e., records 21 that do "not fall within an exemption." Minier v. CIA, 88 F.3d 796, 803 (9th Cir. 1996); see 22 also 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B) (providing the district court with jurisdiction only "to enjoin the 23 agency from withholding agency records and to order the production of any agency records 24 improperly withheld from the complainant"); Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the 25 Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150 (1980) ("Under 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B)[,] federal jurisdiction is 26 dependent upon a showing that an agency has (1) 'improperly'; (2) 'withheld'; (3) 'agency 27 records.'"). Despite the "liberal congressional purpose" of FOIA, the statutory exemptions 28 must be given "meaningful reach and application." John Doe, 493 U.S. at 152.

1 While Government defendants bear the burden of proving that the withheld information
 2 falls within the exemptions it invokes, 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B); King v. DOJ, 830 F.2d 210, 3 217 (D.C. Cir. 1987), courts nonetheless “accord substantial weight to an agency’s declarations
 4 regarding the application of a FOIA exemption.” Shannahan v. IRS, 672 F.3d 1142, 1148 (9th
 5 Cir. 2012). Thus, in a FOIA case, a court may grant summary judgment to Government 6 defendants solely on the basis of information provided in affidavits or declarations that describe 7 “the justifications for nondisclosure with reasonably specific detail, demonstrate that the 8 information withheld logically falls within the claimed exemption, and are not controverted by 9 either contrary evidence in the record nor by evidence of agency bad faith.” Military Audit
 10 Project v. Casey, 656 F.2d 724, 738 (D.C. Cir. 1981); see also Animal Legal Def. Fund v. U.S.
 11 Food & Drug Admin., 836 F.3d 987, 989 (9th Cir. 2016) (en banc) (“Most FOIA cases are 12 resolved by the district court on summary judgment, with the district court entering judgment 13 as a matter of law.”); Lawyers’ Comm. for Civil Rights of S.F. Bay Area v. Dep’t of the 14 Treasury, 534 F. Supp. 2d 1126, 1131 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (“As a general rule, all FOIA 15 determinations should be resolved on summary judgment.”).

16 Given these standards, the attached Declaration of Susan L. Kim demonstrates that the 17 Justice Department appropriately withheld the FISA Memo and Cover Memo in full under 18 Exemption 5. As the Kim Declaration shows, the two memoranda consist of attorney work 19 product and attorney-client communications, with no meaningful segregable materials. The 20 Justice Department’s withholdings were thus entirely proper under FOIA, and it is entitled to 21 summary judgment.

22 I. THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT PROPERLY WITHHELD ATTORNEY- 23 AUTHORED MEMORANDA OFFERING LEGAL ANALYSIS AND RELATED 24 STRATEGIC CONSIDERATIONS AS ATTORNEY WORK PRODUCT UNDER 25 FOIA EXEMPTION 5.

26 A. The Government May Withhold Attorney-Authored Litigation Guidance as 27 Attorney Work Product.

28 Under Exemption 5, FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure “inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters that would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency.” 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). Exemption 5 permits agencies to 1 withhold privileged information, including attorney work product, deliberative materials, and 2 confidential attorney-client communications. See, e.g., NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S.

3 132, 149 (1975); Maricopa Audubon Soc’y v. U.S. Forest Serv., 108 F.3d 1089, 1092 (9th Cir.
4 1997).

5 Here, Defendant is withholding both the FISA Memo and the Cover Memo in full under 6 Exemption 5 as attorney work product. Protecting attorney work product is essential to the fair 7 and effective conduct of litigation: “Without a strong work-product privilege, lawyers would 8 keep their thoughts to themselves, avoid communicating with other lawyers, and hesitate to take 9 notes.” In re Sealed Case, 146 F.3d 881, 884 (D.C. Cir. 1998); accord Hickman v. Taylor, 329 10 U.S. 495, 510 (1947) (“[I]t is essential that a lawyer work with a certain degree of privacy, free 11 from unnecessary intrusion by opposing parties and their counsel.”). Hence, “[t]he privilege 12 aims primarily to protect the integrity of the adversary trial process itself . . . [and] [i]t does so 13 by providing a working attorney with a zone of privacy within which to think, plan, weigh facts 14 and evidence, candidly evaluate a client’s case, and prepare legal theories.” NACDL, 844 F.3d at 15 251 (citations omitted); accord United States v. Christensen, 828 F.3d 763, 805 (9th Cir. 2015)
16 (“The purpose of the work product privilege is to protect the integrity of the adversary 17 process.”).

18 “To qualify for work-product protection, documents must: (1) be ‘prepared in 19 anticipation of litigation or for trial’ and (2) be prepared ‘by or for another party or by or for that 20 other party’s representative.’” United States v. Richey, 632 F.3d 559, 567 (9th Cir. 2011) 21 (quoting In re Grand Jury Subpoena, Mark Torf/Torf Envtl. Mgmt., 357 F.3d 900, 907 (9th Cir.
22 2004)). “Whatever the outer boundaries of the attorney’s work-product rule are, the rule clearly 23 applies to memoranda prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation which set forth the 24 attorney’s theory of the case and his litigation strategy.” Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. at 154.

25 “[D]ocuments are deemed prepared because of litigation if in light of the nature of the 26 document and the factual situation in the particular case, the document can be fairly said to have 27 been prepared or obtained because of the prospect of litigation.” Richey, 632 F.3d at 568 28 (citations omitted). When applying this standard, “courts must consider the totality of the 1 circumstances and determine whether the document was created because of anticipated litigation, 2 and would not have been created in substantially similar form but for the prospect of litigation.”

3 Id. (citations omitted).

4 The phrase “in anticipation of litigation” extends beyond an attorney’s preparation for a 5 specific case in existing litigation, such that “documents prepared in anticipation of foreseeable 6 litigation, even if no specific claim is contemplated” may also be attorney work product.
7 Feshbach v. SEC, 5 F. Supp. 2d 774, 782 (N.D. Cal. 1997) (citing Schiller v. NLRB, 964 F.2d 8 1205, 1208 (D.C. Cir. 1992), abrogated on other grounds by Milner v. Dep’t of Navy, 562 U.S.
9 562 (2011)); see also NACDL, 844 F.3d at 253 (“[W]e have long held that there is no general, 10 overarching requirement that a governmental document can fall within the work-product 11 privilege only if prepared in anticipation of litigating a specific claim.”); Hertzberg v. Veneman, 12 273 F. Supp. 2d 67, 78 (D.D.C. 2003) (“To qualify for work product protection, litigation need 13 not be actual or imminent; it need only be ‘fairly foreseeable.’”) (quoting Coastal States Gas 14 Corp. v. Dep’t of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 865 (D.C. Cir. 1980)).

15 Thus, internal Government memoranda addressing “recurring research topics” that are 16 intended “to provide consistent and thorough information to all attorneys” litigating various 17 categories of cases have been found to be work product created in anticipation of litigation, and 18 thus exempt from disclosure under FOIA. Raytheon Aircraft v. U.S. Army Corps of Eng’rs, 183 19 F. Supp. 2d 1280, 1285, 1289–90 (D. Kan. 2001); see also Delaney, Migdail & Young, 20 Chartered v. IRS, 826 F.2d 124, 127 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (work product protection for memoranda 21 that “advise the agency of the types of legal challenges likely to be mounted against a proposed 22 program, potential defenses available to the agency, and the likely outcome”); Schiller, 964 F.2d 23 at 1208 (work product protection for Government documents that “contain[] tips for handling
24 unfair labor practice cases that could affect subsequent [Equal Access to Justice Act (“EAJA”)]
25 litigation, that [ . . . ] contain[] advice on how to build an EAJA defense and how to litigate EAJA 26 cases, and that [ . . . ] provide instructions on preparing and filing pleadings in EAJA cases, 27 including arguments and authorities.”); James Madison Project v. CIA, 607 F. Supp. 2d 109, 130 28 (D.D.C. 2009) (“Because the legal advice contained in the documents covered documents that

1 the defendant has frequently litigated, the court determines that litigation on these topics was 2 reasonably foreseeable when the documents were created, even though no specific claim was 3 contemplated at the time.”); N.Y. Times Co. v. Dep’t of Defense, 499 F. Supp. 2d 501, 517
4 (S.D.N.Y. 2007) (documents from U.S. Attorney’s Office “provid[ing] guidance for responding 5 to motions made in criminal litigation” properly withheld as work product).

6 Two recent cases confirming that the Government may withhold such litigation 7 memoranda are especially instructive here. In the first, National Association of Criminal 8 Defense Lawyers (“NACDL”) v. Department of Justice, 844 F.3d 246 (D.C. Cir. 2016), the 9 Justice Department withheld as attorney work product an internal DOJ publication known as the 10 Federal Criminal Discovery Blue Book, which “describes the nature and scope of federal 11 prosecutors’ discovery obligations under applicable constitutional provisions, caselaw, and the 12 Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure.” Id. at 249, 251 (citation omitted). In NACDL, the D.C.
13 Circuit flatly rejected the plaintiffs’ argument that, because the Blue Book offered general 14 litigation guidance rather than dealing with specific claims, it could not have been prepared in 15 anticipation of litigation: the Blue Book “is aimed directly for use in (and will inevitably be used 16 in) litigating cases” and thus disclosing it “risks revealing DOJ’s litigation strategies and legal 17 theories regardless of whether it was prepared with a specific claim in mind.” Id. at 254.
18 Documents “prepared with the litigation of all charges and all cases in mind” are still attorney 19 work product. Id.

20 The D.C. Circuit further noted in NACDL that the Blue Book generally consists of “legal 21 analysis” interspersed with “strategic considerations, procedures, and practical advice.” Id. at 22 256 (citation omitted). Such discussion of “legal strategy,” the D.C. Circuit held, was “exactly 23 the sort of information” that was protected by Exemption 5 as attorney work product. Id. at 256 24 (citation omitted). Similarly, although the legal analysis contained in the Blue Book might be 25 based on publicly available law and have an “air of neutrality,” “disclosure of the publicly-26 available information a lawyer has decided to include in a litigation guide—such as citations of 27 (or specific quotations from) particular judicial decisions and other legal sources—would tend to 28

1 reveal the lawyer’s thoughts about which authorities are important and for which purposes,” thus 2 implicating attorney work product protection. Id.

3         The D.C. Circuit’s decision in NACDL in turn greatly informed the Southern District of 4 New York’s analysis in its decisions in ACLU v. Department of Justice, Civil Action No. 13-5 7347 (S.D.N.Y.), a case with even more in common with the instant case than NACDL. In the 6 S.D.N.Y. case, the Justice Department withheld as attorney work product “memoranda [that] 7 address how to determine if information has been derived from FISA for use in criminal 8 prosecutions or other adjudications and the application of FISA’s notice provisions in those 9 proceedings.” ACLU v. DOJ, 210 F. Supp. 3d 467, 482–83 (S.D.N.Y. 2016) (quoting DOJ 10 declarations describing the documents). Thus, although the FISA Memo and Cover Memo were 11 not themselves at issue in this S.D.N.Y. litigation—they had not yet been completed when the 12 FOIA search in the S.D.N.Y. case was conducted, see Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–5—the case did concern 13 other internal DOJ memoranda addressing the very same issues.

14         The ACLU court upheld the withholding of the DOJ memoranda regarding FISA 15 derivation, concluding that the Justice Department’s declarations “demonstrate[d] that the 16 documents at issue are necessarily geared to litigation in which DOJ’s notice obligations under 17 [FISA] will be at issue, and that these documents would not have been prepared in substantially 18 similar form but for the prospect of that litigation.” ACLU, 210 F. Supp. 3d at 483 (citation 19 omitted); ACLU v. DOJ, 13-cv-7347, 2017 WL 1658780, *6 (S.D.N.Y. May 2, 2017) (same).
20 The court discussed the NACDL decision and noted that the memoranda regarding FISA 21 derivation, like the Blue Book, “address[] how attorneys on one side of an adversarial dispute—22 federal prosecutors—should conduct litigation,” including “positions to be taken in [] criminal 23 prosecutions or other adjudications and potential issues for prosecutors’ consideration in 24 anticipation of litigation that Department attorneys would ultimately defend on behalf on the 25 Department.” ACLU, 210 F. Supp. 3d at 484 (citation omitted). Thus, the memoranda, like the 26 Blue Book, were protected attorney work product. Id.; ACLU, 2017 WL 1658780 at *6.

1           B.     The Withheld Memoranda Consist of Legal Analysis and Strategic 2           Considerations Prepared by Attorneys in Advance of Litigation and Thus 3           Constitute Attorney Work Product.

4           The holdings in NACDL and ACLU (S.D.N.Y.) squarely apply to the FISA Memo and 5 Cover Memo.<sup>2</sup> Like the Blue Book at issue in NACDL and the FISA-derivation memoranda at 6 issue in ACLU (S.D.N.Y.), the FISA Memo and Cover Memo consist of a mix of legal analysis 7 and strategic considerations regarding a question that arises in litigation—when information is 8 “derived from” surveillance such that notice must be provided—and are designed for DOJ attorneys’ use in such litigation. Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–7.

9           As discussed above, both Title III and FISA allow evidence obtained or “derived from” 10 electronic surveillance to be used in litigation if certain conditions are met. See 18 U.S.C.
 11 § 2518(9); 50 U.S.C. § 1806(c); see also Kim Decl. ¶ 6. In particular, both require the 12 Government to provide notice of the surveillance to certain persons before evidence obtained or 13 “derived from” Government electronic surveillance may be used in such litigation. See 18 14 U.S.C. § 2518(9); 50 U.S.C. § 1806(c); see also Kim Decl. ¶ 6. Consequently, in cases in which 15 the Government has conducted related electronic surveillance, federal prosecutors and other 16 Justice Department attorneys may be required to determine whether evidence on which they 17 intend to rely was in any respect “derived from” the electronic surveillance, in order to know 18 whether they are required to provide notice of that surveillance to litigants. Kim Decl. ¶ 6. In 19 the FISA Memo and Cover Memo, senior Justice Department attorneys attempt to assist other

---

20           <sup>2</sup> Obviously, neither NACDL nor ACLU (S.D.N.Y.) is binding precedent here. Both 21 decisions, however, use the same standard employed by the Ninth Circuit when determining 22 whether a document is prepared “in anticipation of litigation”: whether the document was 23 prepared because of the prospect of litigation. Compare Richey, 632 F.3d at 568, with 24 NACDL, 844 F.3d at 251, and ACLU, 210 F. Supp. at 476. And courts throughout the 25 United States regularly find the reasoning of D.C. Circuit FOIA decisions persuasive in 26 light of the disproportionate number of FOIA cases it handles. See, e.g., Matlack, Inc. v.
 27 EPA, 868 F. Supp. 627, 630 (D. Del. 1994) (“The United States Court of Appeals for the 28 District of Columbia Circuit has long been on the leading edge of interpreting the parameters of what a federal agency must disclose and may withhold consistent with the terms of FOIA.”);
Estate of Ghais Abduljaami v. U.S. Dep’t of State, 14-cv-7902, 2016 WL 94140, *5 n.2
 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 7, 2016) (“Courts in the Second Circuit frequently cite FOIA decisions from the D.C. Circuit as it is a jurisdiction with considerable experience on FOIA matters.”) (citation omitted).

1 Justice Department attorneys with making this determination, i.e., with determining whether 2 evidence in a case was “derived from” electronic surveillance under Title III or FISA such that 3 notice must be provided in litigation, and provide related legal and practical observations about 4 such cases. Id. ¶ 4–7. They also provide various strategic considerations, such as what steps
5 Justice Department attorneys should take to ensure they are complying with the relevant law 6 during litigation and what legal arguments and litigation approaches have the greatest chance of 7 success in light of the law in this area. Id.

8 Thus, as in NACDL and ACLU (S.D.N.Y.), compelling the disclosure of these 9 memoranda would reveal litigation strategies and legal theories used by DOJ attorneys in 10 litigation, id., thereby revealing exactly the sort of materials that courts have consistently held 11 are protected from disclosure as attorney work product.

12 Plaintiffs here may argue, as the plaintiffs did in NACDL and ACLU (S.D.N.Y.), that the 13 FISA Memo and Cover Memo simply summarize public law and DOJ policy, and thus are not 14 attorney work product. As those decisions held, however, regardless of how one might attempt 15 to characterize such DOJ litigation memoranda, they remain attorney work product in light of 16 their fundamental “adversarial function.” NACDL, 844 F.3d at 255; accord ACLU, 210 F. Supp.
17 3d at 484. Indeed, even when such internal DOJ documents are also used for non-litigation 18 functions, such as “educational or training” purposes, such uses do not make them any less 19 attorney work product: “material generated in anticipation of litigation may also be used for 20 ordinary business purposes without losing its protected status” and thus “any educational or 21 training function the Blue Book might serve would not negate the document’s adversarial use in 22 (and its preparation in anticipation of) litigation.” NACDL, 844 F.3d at 255; accord ACLU, 210
23 F. Supp. 3d at 484. Similarly, the courts rejected plaintiffs’ contentions that the documents 24 merely consisted of general legal interpretations and that such interpretations cannot be protected 25 as attorney work product; the court noted that even seemingly neutral discussions of legal 26 authorities tend to reveal an attorney’s thoughts about litigation when those legal discussions are 27 created in anticipation of litigation. NACDL, 844 F.3d at 255 (emphasizing that the Blue Book 28 “does not merely pertain to the subject of litigation in the abstract,” but how attorneys should

1 approach legal problems in the context of anticipated litigation); ACLU, 210 F. Supp. 3d at 484 2 (same).

3 The FISA Memo and Cover Memo are also not subject to disclosure as “working law,” 4 an argument that the court rejected in ACLU (S.D.N.Y.). As the ACLU court noted, “[i]t has 5 been clearly established for nearly forty years that documents disclosable under FOIA as agency 6 working law may nevertheless be withheld if they are protected by the attorney work product 7 privilege.” ACLU, 210 F. Supp. 3d at 478; see also id. at 480 (collecting cases). A document’s 8 use as working law may prevent it from being withheld under the deliberative process privilege, 9 as such use indicates a degree of finality, but has no bearing on whether the document may be 10 withheld as attorney work product. See id. at 479–81. “As is evident from the NACDL court’s 11 opinion, the Blue book is a final, concrete document binding on ‘all DOJ prosecutors and 12 paralegals,’ . . . and was still found to constitute protected attorney work product.” Id. at 484
13 (internal citation omitted). Thus, the issue of whether the FISA Memo and Cover Memo 14 constitute working law is irrelevant to the question of whether they have been properly withheld.

15 In any event, the FISA Memo and Cover Memo are not in fact DOJ working law. Only a 16 “conclusive or authoritative statement of [an agency’s] policy” constitutes working law. Elec.
17 Frontier Found. v. Dep’t of Justice, 739 F.3d 1, 9 (D.C. Cir. 2014). Legal advice and analysis, 18 even if customarily followed, is not working law if it lacks this binding, authoritative character.
19 Id.; cf. N.Y. Times v. Dep’t of Justice, 101 F. Supp. 3d 310, 318 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (“Documents 20 that advise agency personnel of likely legal challenges and potential defenses . . . do not 21 constitute working law.”) (citation omitted). Here, nothing in the FISA Memo or Cover Memo 22 purports to provide binding policy instruction to DOJ attorneys. Kim Decl. ¶ 7.<sup>3</sup> Indeed, the 23 Cover Memo explicitly states that the FISA Memo is not intended to provide comprehensive

24
25 <sup>3</sup> The Cover Memo and FISA Memo were final, disseminated memoranda regarding FISA 26 derivation, see Kim Dec. ¶¶ 4–5, in contrast to the draft memoranda regarding FISA derivation at 27 issue in ACLU (S.D.N.Y.), see 210 F. Supp. 3d at 483–84. But this difference is irrelevant here.
28 First, the attorney work product protects both final documents and drafts. See ACLU, 210 F.
Supp. 3d at 484 (“The work product privilege is certainly no less applicable to the non-governing NSD documents at issue in this case than it was applicable to the final manual made available to prosecutors nationwide, as was at issue in NACDL.”). Second, a document is not working law merely because it is final—only if it is a binding, authoritative statement of policy. Elec.
Frontier Found., 739 F.3d at 9.

1 guidance regarding Title III or FISA, but rather to provide an overview of relevant legal and 2 strategic considerations for attorneys' use. Id. The FISA Memo is to be used as a starting point 3 for determinations of whether information is "derived from" surveillance, to be supplemented by 4 attorneys' own updated legal research and consultation with Justice Department attorneys 5 knowledgeable about such matters. Id. The Cover Memo and FISA Memo make clear that the 6 law they discuss is subject to further revision by courts, and that this law itself remains the 7 authority binding on DOJ attorneys, not the analysis and advice about the law provided the 8 Cover Memo and FISA Memo themselves. Id.

9 Thus, because, as the Kim Declaration demonstrates, the FISA Memo and Cover Memo 10 offer advice, legal analysis, and strategic consideration for DOJ attorneys to use in (or when 11 preparing for) litigation, id. ¶¶ 4–7, 10, they were properly withheld under FOIA Exemption 5 as 12 attorney work product.

13 C. The Withheld Memoranda Do Not Contain Any Segregable Information.

14 Although FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record . . . be 15 provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt
16 under this subsection," 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), such segregation was not required for the FISA Memo 17 and Cover Memo because all portions of a document prepared by an attorney in anticipation of 18 litigation are generally protected from disclosure. See Tax Analysts v. IRS, 117 F.3d 607, 620 19 (D.C. Cir. 1997) ("Any part of [a document] prepared in anticipation of litigation, not just the 20 portions concerning opinions, legal theories, and the like, is protected by the work product 21 doctrine and falls under exemption 5."); Pac. Fisheries, Inc. v. United States, 539 F.3d 1143, 22 1148 (9th Cir. 2008) ("[I]f a document is covered by the attorney work-product privilege, the 23 government need not segregate and disclose its factual contents.").

24 In NACDL, the D.C. Circuit held that it was nonetheless "generally preferable" to assess 25 "the feasibility of segregating nonexempt material" in "cases involving voluminous or lengthy 26 work-product records." NACDL, 844 F.3d at 256–57. Even so, the D.C. Circuit noted that it was 27 not calling for "line-by-line" parsing or segregating of material "dispersed throughout the 28

1 document,” only segregation of material found in “logically divisible sections” in lengthy work
2 product. Id. at 257.

3 These instructions do not apply to the FISA Memo and Cover Memo, which in contrast 4 to the over five-hundred-page Blue Book at issue in NACDL, id. at 256, total only thirty-two and 5 two pages respectively. Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–5; see also ACLU, 2017 WL 1658780 at *8 6 (distinguishing the DOJ memoranda at issue from NACDL because the memoranda ranged from 7 one to thirty-eight pages and were not easily divided into discrete sections). But even if 8 segregation were required here, the attached Kim Declaration indicates that the Justice 9 Department adequately reviewed the FISA Memo and Cover Memo for non-exempt material.
10 See Kim Decl. ¶ 13.

11 A court “may rely on government affidavits that show with reasonable specificity why 12 documents withheld pursuant to a valid exemption cannot be further segregated.” Juarez v.
13 Dep’t of Justice, 518 F.3d 54, 61 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (internal citation omitted); accord Pac.
14 Fisheries, 539 F.3d at 1148 (“The agency can meet its burden [of showing documents cannot be 15 further segregated] by offering an affidavit with reasonably detailed descriptions of the withheld 16 portions of the documents and alleging facts sufficient to establish an exemption.”). “[A]gencies 17 are entitled to a presumption that they complied with the obligation to disclose reasonably 18 segregable material,” Sussman v. U.S. Marshals Serv., 494 F.3d 1106, 1117 (D.C. Cir. 2007), 19 and an agency has no obligation to segregate non-exempt material that is so “inextricably 20 intertwined” with exempt material that “the excision of exempt information would impose 21 significant costs on the agency and produce an edited document with little informational value.” 22 Neufeld v. IRS, 646 F.2d 661, 666 (D.C. Cir. 1981), abrogated on other grounds by Church of 23 Scientology of Cal. v. IRS, 792 F.2d 153 (D.C. Cir. 1986); see also Nat’l Sec. Archive Fund, Inc.
24 v. CIA, 402 F. Supp. 2d 211, 220–21 (D.D.C. 2005) (same).

25 Here, the Justice Department far exceeded its obligations by conducting a line-by-line
26 review of the FISA Memo and Cover Memo. It did not identify any reasonably segregable 27 information that was not attorney work product. Kim Decl. ¶ 13. The Justice Department, 28 therefore, properly withheld the Memos in full under Exemption 5, and summary judgment

1 should be granted for the Justice Department. See Johnson v. Exec. Office for U.S. Attorneys,
2 310 F.3d 771, 776–77 (D.C. Cir. 2002) (explaining that agency showed there was no reasonably 3 segregable non-exempt information where it submitted affidavit showing that agency had 4 conducted line-by-line review of each document).

5 II. THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT ALSO PROPERLY WITHHELD THE 6 ATTORNEY-AUTHORED MEMORANDA AS ATTORNEY-CLIENT
7 COMMUNICATION UNDER FOIA EXEMPTION 5.

8 “The purpose of the attorney-client privilege is to encourage full and frank 9 communications between attorneys and their clients and thereby promote broader public interests 10 in the observance of law and administration of justice.” Christensen, 828 F.3d at 802 (citation 11 omitted). “The attorney-client privilege protects confidential disclosures made by a client to an 12 attorney . . . to obtain legal advice . . . as well as an attorney’s advice in response to such 13 disclosures.” Id. “The attorney-client privilege applies to communications between lawyers and 14 their clients when the lawyers act in a counseling and planning role, as well as when lawyers 15 represent their clients in litigation.” United States v. Chen, 99 F.3d 1495, 1501 (9th Cir. 1996).
16 And the privilege applies to communications between Government attorneys and their clients
17 within the Government. United States v. Jicarilla Apache Nation, 564 U.S. 162, 169–70 (2011) 18 (“The objectives of the attorney-client privilege apply to governmental clients. . . . Unless 19 applicable law provides otherwise, the Government may invoke the attorney-client privilege in 20 civil litigation to protect confidential communications between Government officials and 21 Government attorneys.”); see also In re Cty. of Erie, 473 F.3d 413, 418 (2d Cir. 2007) (“In civil 22 suits between private litigants and government agencies, the attorney-client privilege protects 23 most confidential communications between government counsel and their clients that are made 24 for the purpose of obtaining or providing legal assistance.”).

25 The FISA Memo and Cover Memo consist of legal advice, reflecting the authoring 26 attorneys’ advice to other DOJ attorneys about how they should determine if information is 27 derived from surveillance, comply with Title III’s and FISA’s notice provisions, and otherwise 28 confront related issues in the course of litigation. Kim Decl. ¶¶ 4–7, 12. This legal advice was created in response to confidential, internal discussions and information from DOJ officials

1 seeking advice on this topic, and this advice has itself been kept confidential—circulated only 2 within the Executive Branch and accessed only by lawyers working on issues addressed by the 3 Memos. Id. ¶¶ 6–7, 12. Its disclosure would represent an intrusion into the attorney-client 4 relationship between the attorneys who wrote the Memos and other DOJ officials (generally, of 5 course, themselves attorneys), impeding the Government’s efforts to obtain and utilize full and 6 frank legal advice to, in addition to providing litigation strategy, ensure its observance of the 7 law. See In re Cty. of Erie, 473 F.3d at 419 (noting that the need to protect attorney-client
 8 communications applies with “special force in the government context” because Government 9 employees must be encouraged “to seek out and receive fully informed legal advice.”). Thus, the 10 Memos are protected by the attorney-client privilege. As noted above, the Memos contain no 11 reasonably segregable material, Kim Decl. ¶ 13, and they accordingly were properly withheld in 12 full under Exemption 5.

CONCLUSION

14 For the foregoing reasons, and as further discussed in the attached Kim Declaration, the 15 Court should grant summary judgment to the Justice Department on all claims.
