I. INTRODUCTION

2 The Court should deny Defendants' Motion for Leave to Submit the Declaration of 3 Timothy P. Groh, Deputy Director for Operations of the Terrorist Screening Center ("TSC") of 4 the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") ex parte, in camera. First, Defendants intend this ex 5 parte, in camera declaration to support, at least in part, yet another 11th-hour assertion of 6 privilege, this time by the FBI. By not asserting privilege over the documents that Plaintiffs 7 specifically requested unredacted seven months ago, the FBI has waived any claim to privilege
8 over the documents at issue. Second, Defendants also seek to introduce this declaration to argue 9 that Defendants' interest in nondisclosure of the redacted information outweighs Plaintiffs' need 10 for the information. The Court's review of ex parte, in camera documents—to which Plaintiffs 11 have no meaningful way to respond—puts Plaintiffs at a significant disadvantage in proving the 12 applicable balancing test weighs in their favor. Third, Defendants fail to meet the high burden to 13 justify review of the declaration ex parte, in camera. Defendants do not claim the document is 14 classified. Defendants have not invoked the state secrets privilege. Defendants claim no statutory 15 authority requiring ex parte, in camera review. Nor is this FOIA litigation. The authority that 16 Defendants rely on is unpersuasive. To address Defendants' purported security concerns, 17 Defendants could produce the declaration to Plaintiffs' counsel under an Attorneys' Eyes Only 18 protective order, but they have refused to do so. Defendants' motion should be denied.

19 The Court is well versed in the facts and legal arguments associated with this motion to 20 compel. In addition to briefs on the issue, Defendants have already filed nearly 50 pages of 21 declarations to support their position on the 25 documents at issue here alone. See Dkt. 266-1.
22 Therefore, the Court should not allow Defendants to undermine the adversarial legal system and 23 submit another declaration without providing Plaintiffs, or at least their counsel, any opportunity 24 to respond.

II. ARGUMENT

A. Defendants Cannot Avoid Producing Documents by Asserting Additional Privilege Claims at the 11th-Hour.

Defendants ask for the Court's permission to raise another roadblock to prevent Plaintiffs from receiving documents to which they are entitled. At the latest, Defendants should have raised the FBI's assertion of privilege over certain law enforcement redactions over seven months ago—when Plaintiffs first met and conferred with Defendants seeking only 38 documents from hundreds asserting the law enforcement privilege. Dkt. 261 at 1–2. Instead, Defendants and the FBI waited to assert the FBI's privilege claim until after Plaintiffs filed a motion to compel a subset of those 38 documents. Dkt. 266-1, Ex. D, Groh Decl. ¶14.

By failing to raise the law enforcement privilege at an earlier juncture, the FBI waived the privilege. “Failing to timely assert a privilege results in its waiver.” United States v. $43,660.00 in U.S. Currency, No. 1:15CV208, 2016 WL 1629284, at *5 (M.D.N.C. Apr. 22, 2016); see also Applied Sys., Inc. v. N. Ins. Co. of New York, No. 97 C 1565, 1997 WL 639235, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 7, 1997) (finding waiver of privilege assertion where defendant produced nothing in the months following plaintiff's discovery requests and did not apprise the plaintiff of its intent to object based on privilege or the work-product doctrine until the motion to compel hearing). Defendants should have raised the FBI's assertion of privilege with specificity at a much earlier juncture and not for the first time in opposition to a motion to compel. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure aim to prevent this kind of conduct by requiring parties to submit responses and objections to written discovery within 30 days. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(b)(2); see also Hall v. Sullivan, 231 F.R.D. 468, 473 (D. Md. 2005) (setting forth “strong policy reasons favoring a requirement that a party raise all existing objections to document production requests with particularity and at the time of answering the request.”). Neither logic nor legal authority supports Defendants piecemeal strategy of raising privilege claims seriatim. Defendants' piecemeal approach is contrary to law, significantly prejudices Plaintiffs' ability to challenge those privilege claims, and should be rejected. The Court should deny Defendants' motion for

1 leave to the extent the declaration seeks to bolster the FBI's invocation of the law enforcement 2 privilege.

3 B. Defendants' Motion Highlights the Unfairness of Ex Parte, In Camera Review.

4 Defendants submit the declaration ex parte, in camera in an attempt to influence the 5 balancing test that determines whether Defendants' interest in nondisclosure outweighs 6 Plaintiffs' need for information that is highly relevant to proving their claims. Dkt. 267 at 1. This 7 puts Plaintiffs at a significant disadvantage, because they have no ability to challenge
8 Defendants' assertions. See United States v. Thompson, 827 F.2d 1254, 1258 (9th Cir. 1987)
9 ("Even in civil cases, the district court may not adopt procedures that tend to significantly favor 10 one party over the other."). Allowing Defendants to provide a declaration ex parte, in camera
11 that claims to be relevant to Defendants' interest in non-disclosure, and to which Plaintiffs have 12 no meaningful opportunity to respond, unfairly places a heavy thumb on the balancing scale in 13 favor of Defendants. See Dkt. 239 at 3–4. As such, the Court should deny Defendants' motion.

14 C. Defendants Have Not Met the High Burden to Justify Ex Parte, In Camera Review.

15 Even if Defendants' privilege assertions were procedurally proper and timely, Defendants 16 have not met their burden to support ex parte, in camera review. "[C]ourts routinely express 17 their disfavor with ex parte proceedings and permit such proceedings only in the rarest of 18 circumstances." United States v. Libby, 429 F. Supp. 2d 18, 21 (D.D.C. 2006), opinion amended
19 on reconsideration, 429 F. Supp. 2d 46 (D.D.C. 2006); see also Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee 20 Comm. v. McGrath, 341 U.S. 123, 170 (1951) (Frankfurter, J., concurring) (observing that 21 "fairness can rarely be obtained by secret, one-sided determination of facts decisive of rights" 22 and holding use of ex parte evidence unauthorized by statute in employment context, even given 23 national security concerns). Defendants' vague argument does not satisfy their burden.
24 Defendants assert in broad strokes that the declaration cannot be filed publicly or under seal 25 "without damage to the national interest." Dkt. 267 at 2.

1 Defendants' motion omits several critical details for the Court to properly assess whether 2 ex parte, in camera submissions are appropriate here. Defendants do not establish that the 3 declaration contains classified information. The "damage to the national interest" rationale could 4 be read merely as the government's preference to not file the declaration publicly. And, even if 5 the declaration did contain classified information, Defendants should be required to utilize 6 "mitigation measures" such as declassification of relevant information, unclassified summaries, 7 or the use of restricted protective orders, rather than blanket withholdings based on generalized
8 national security claims. See Al Haramain Islamic Found., Inc. v. U.S. Dep't of Treasury, 686
9 F.3d 965, 984 (9th Cir. 2012); see also Latif v. Holder, 28 F. Supp. 3d 1134, 1162 (D. Or. 2014) 10 (requiring the government provide, inter alia, "unclassified summaries of the reasons for 11 [plaintiffs'] respective placement on the No-Fly List").

12 Defendants additionally make no express claim that the declaration itself is privileged 13 and incapable of review by the Plaintiffs. Instead, Defendants merely claim that the declaration 14 contains sensitive nonpublic explanations of the harms and risks that may result if certain 15 information withheld from production were disclosed. See Dkt. 267 at 1–2. Finally, Defendants 16 offer no compelling rationale why the Protective Order in this case or an alternative procedure, 17 such as permitting Plaintiffs' counsel to review in camera or under a more restrictive Attorneys' 18 Eyes Only protective order, are not sufficient to safeguard the information contained in the 19 declaration.

20 Moreover, exceptions to the general rule against ex parte, in camera submissions "are 21 both few and tightly contained." Abourezk v. Reagan, 785 F.2d 1043, 1061 (D.C. Cir. 1986). The 22 court in Abourezk identified three narrow exceptions to the presumption against ex parte, in 23 camera proceedings: (1) review of the redacted or withheld documents to assess the claim of 24 privilege, (2) in the face of a proper invocation of the state secrets privilege, and (3) when a 25 statute expressly provides for such proceedings. See id. None of these exceptions apply here.
26

1           First, Defendants do not seek to submit withheld documents for adjudication of the scope
2 of their asserted privilege. Although the “inspection of materials by a judge isolated in chambers 3 may occur when a party seeks to prevent use of the materials in the litigation,” this exception is 4 intended to facilitate the judge’s review of the actual materials the party seeks to protect from 5 disclosure. See id.; see also Arieff v. U.S. Dep’t of Navy, 712 F.2d 1462, 1469 (D.C. Cir. 1983) 6 (distinguishing between the submission of documents and the submission of affidavits and 7 observing that the latter constitutes “a greater distortion of normal judicial process, since it 8 combines the element of secrecy with the element of one-sided, ex parte presentation”). Here, 9 Defendants do not ask the Court to review the 25 documents at issue in the motion to compel to 10 decide whether they are in fact privileged. Defendants’ citation to cases that exclusively discuss 11 the ex parte, in camera review of underlying documents is thus unavailing. See, e.g., In re City of 12 New York, 607 F.3d 923, 948–49 (2d Cir. 2010) (“[R]ather than require that the parties file the 13 potentially privileged documents with the court, the district court may . . . require that the party 14 possessing the documents appear ex parte in chambers to submit the documents for in camera 15 review by the judge.”).

16           Defendants instead seek to submit a declaration that apparently contain the FBI’s 17 explanation as to why this information cannot be “disclosed outside the U.S. government.”
18 Dkt. 267 at 1. But this is the type of information that should be provided to Plaintiffs (or at least 19 their counsel) to enable Plaintiffs to challenge Defendants’ privilege assertions. Indeed, “[w]hile 20 a court may review documents in camera to assess the scope of a privilege, the court may not 21 rely on an ex parte, in camera review of documents to resolve an issue on the merits.” See Apple
22 Inc. v. Samsung Elecs. Co., No. 11-CV-01846-LHK, 2015 WL 3863249, at *10 (N.D. Cal. June 23 19, 2015). Defendants not only ask the Court to rely on an ex parte, in camera review of 24 documents to resolve an issue on the merits, but Defendants argue it is necessary to do so. See 25 Dkt. 267 at 1. The Court should not resolve both motions using information that Plaintiffs cannot 26 see and to which they therefore can offer no reply. See United States v. Abuhamra, 389 F.3d 309,

1 322 (2d Cir. 2004) (rejecting attempt to rely on secret evidence and holding that “due process 2 demands that the individual and the government each be afforded the opportunity not only to 3 advance their respective positions but to correct or contradict arguments or evidence offered by 4 the other”).

5 Defendants also fail to support their contention that the rationale for the privilege is itself 6 privileged. They have not explained why “release of the declaration would disclose the very 7 information that the agency seeks to protect,” see Greyshock v. U.S. Coast Guard, 107 F.3d 16, 8 1997 WL 51514, *3 (9th Cir. Feb. 6, 1997). Instead, Defendants merely assert disclosure would 9 “damage [] the national interest.” Dkt. 267 at 2.

10 Second, courts have reviewed materials ex parte and in camera when the government has 11 properly invoked the state secrets privilege, demonstrated “compelling national security 12 concerns,” and disclosed, “prior to any in camera examination, ... as much of the material as it
13 could divulge without compromising the privilege.” Abourezk, 785 F.2d at 1061. But Defendants 14 have not invoked the state secrets privilege, and the Court has not adjudicated it. See Dkt. 267.
15 Defendants’ cited cases involved ex parte, in camera procedures when the state secrets privilege
16 had properly been invoked are therefore inapposite. See Kasza v. Browner, 133 F.3d 1159, 1169 17 (9th Cir. 1998) (“in camera review of both classified declarations was an appropriate means to 18 resolve the applicability and scope of the state secrets privilege”); Al-Haramain Islamic Found.
19 v. Bush, 507 F.3d 1190, 1203 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that the government sustained its burden 20 as to state secrets privilege regarding a sealed document containing classified information).

21 Third, Defendants identify no statute that expressly permits the use of ex parte, in camera 22 procedures here. See Abourezk, 785 F.2d at 1061; see, e.g., 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B) (providing 23 for in camera inspection in Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) cases); 18 U.S.C. App. § 4
24 (ex parte, in camera review available under the Classified Information Procedures Act (CIPA)).
25 Accordingly, this exception does not apply, and the various cases Defendants cite that allowed 26 ex parte, in camera review pursuant to statute are irrelevant. For instance, Defendants cite

1 ACLU v. Dep't of Defense, No. 09-cv-8071, 2012 WL 13075286 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 24, 2012), but 2 neglect to note that the court in that case expressly grounded its ruling vis-à-vis ex parte
3 submission “in the FOIA context.” Id. at *1; see also United States v. Ott, 827 F.2d 473, 476 (9th 4 Cir. 1987) (concerning ex parte, in camera review of FISA materials); United States v.
5 Klimaviciusi-Viloria, 144 F.3d 1249, 1261 (9th Cir. 1998) (use of ex parte, in camera procedures
6 under CIPA). Further, the case Defendants cite to demonstrate that courts have inherent authority
7 to review “sensitive” information that is not protected by statute is inapposite. In United States v.
8 Thompson, 827 F.2d 1254, 1261 (9th Cir. 1987), the Ninth Circuit expressly rejected the district 9 court’s decision to consider ex parte argument and remanded the case for a hearing on the 10 matter. If anything, Thompson undercuts the Defendants’ position.

11 Ultimately, that the Court “has the authority” to review materials ex parte and in camera, 12 Dkt. 267 at 2—and that other courts have considered such materials under specific 13 circumstances—says little about whether review of Defendants’ proffered materials ex parte and 14 in camera is warranted here. Considered under the proper standard, Defendants’ request fails.

15 III. CONCLUSION

16 Defendants waived their ability to assert new privileges and Defendants have not 17 demonstrated that ex parte, in camera review of any of the Groh Declaration is warranted.
18 Defendants’ motion should be denied.
