(b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

I spoke with (b)(6); (b)(7)(C) (Vice President - Customer Success) and (b)(6); (b)(7)(C) (DHS rep) of Venntel.

They sent a last login report (attached) , and will send the usage report that is generated at the end of each month.

The trial in Newark and Buffalo just started last week.

Trials generally run 30-45 days, however there is no real time limit and they can extend it on request. They also have a trial with ERO.

They are getting many requests for the product from ICE.

(b)(6); (b)(7)(C) who works with (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

They also work with DHS S&T at the Data Analytics Lab under (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

The contacts there are (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

They are also working with CBP and National Targeting.

(b)(7)(E)

They are located in Sterling, VA and come to PCN often.
They are providing training to the National Gang Unit this Wednesday.
They offered to stop by and give us a demo and instructions on using the product.
I may schedule a meeting for next week.

Conference room (b)(7)(E) from 1100-1300.

(b)(6); (b)(7)(C) please have SILO come in at 1030 ish so that then can set up as soon as the conference room is unoccupied... they can start at 11 and go to 12... VENNTEL can start at 1200 to 1300 ..

(b)(6); (b)(7)(C) will be sending the invite shortly.....

 All, I believe the vendors will need for time.... I will keep the 10th floor open... the EOC CR (10th floor) is still pending, but I don't see them denying it. I will keep it open in case we need it, and yes, we will need to escort them, but at least we will have a conference room. I cancelled 10175 from 1400 to 1700.

Good morning all,

Before we can coordinate multiple demo's, we need to provide the AD/ERO Managers with alternate demo dates and times, to accommodate their everchanging schedules. For the upcoming week of February 4-8, 2019, VENNTEL is available, and able to present the demo at the PCN, see below.

Since you are the POC re SILO's accounts, please provide their availability for the upcoming week of February 4-8, 2019. Once we have optional dates/times for SILO's demo, we can then coordinate with the AD/ERO Managers at the PCN, plus (if feasible) VTC for some in Vermont, with the (b)(6); (b)(7)(C) assistance.

All,

I will be TDY all of next week from 9/8 TO 9/14. With this in mind, I will need you all to ensure the following items below are completed this week.

1. Palms-Ensure your training is completed
2. WebTA and Leave- Ensure your leave for the holiday season is submitted. Additionally, any leave you anticipate on taking next week or the following week, will need to be submitted to me and approved prior to 9/6/2019. I will not approve any leave if it's not submitted 5 business days prior to the request date.
3. Divisional Calendar- Ensure all events are placed on the calendar (i.e. Travel, leave, training, etc.)
4. CCWG 9/10- The working group will need to be canceled since very few people will be in the office.
5. Bi-weekly report- I will need weekly updates from everyone to update the Bi-weekly report by 9/6.
6. AD TIPMS way forward meeting- I will need an update for all of the action items for the AD meeting.
7. TIPMS Share Point- I will need all of the updates to provide to (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)
8. CIO HSDN Survey- This will be launched this week.

Hello (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

Your complimentary evaluation period with the Venntel Portal is coming to an end. We hope that you've had the opportunity to experience first-hand the value of Venntel's verified, multi-sourced location data.

Your account credentials will expire on July 31st, at which point you will no longer be able to access the portal. If you'd like to continue using the Venntel Portal, and are interested in an annual subscription, please contact us at info@venntel.com.

Best regards,

iPhones Harvest And Transmit Massive Amounts Of Data While You Sleep

by Tyler Durden

Thu, 05/30/2019 - 15:05

iPhones are surprisingly active in the middle of the night, according to a report by Washington Post Technology writer, Geoffrey Fowler.

Fowler tracked his iPhone's activity recently, finding that dozens of companies were receiving information at all hours.

On a recent Monday night, a dozen marketing companies, research firms and other personal data guzzlers got reports from my iPhone. At 11:43 p.m., a company called Amplitude learned my phone number, email and exact location. At 3:58 a.m., another called Appboy got a digital fingerprint of my phone. At 6:25 a.m., a tracker called Demdex received a way to identify my phone and sent back a list of other trackers to pair up with.

And all night long, there was some startling behavior by a household name: Yelp. It was receiving a message that included my IP address — once every five minutes. —WaPo

Also not lost on Fowler was the irony of a January Apple advertisement which claimed "What happens on your iPhone stays on your iPhone."

iPhone apps passing information in the middle of the night include Microsoft OneDrive, Intuit's Mint, Nike, Spotify, The Washington Post and IBM's the Weather Channel. "One app, the crime-alert service Citizen, shared personally identifiable information in violation of its published privacy policy," Fowler notes.

With the help of privacy firm Disconnect, Fowler encountered over 5,400 trackers in just one week – mostly within apps, that send his information to third party companies. Over the course of a month, the unwanted trackers were on track to upload 1.5 gigabytes of data.

Don't use default privacy settings on sites and devices

"This is your data. Why should it even leave your phone? Why should it be collected by someone when you don't know what they're going to do with it?" said former NSA researcher Patrick Jackson who is currently Disconnect's chief technology officer. Jackson used special software to analyze Fowler's iPhone.

Patrick Jackson, chief technology officer for Disconnect, hooked columnist Geoffrey A. Fowler's iPhone into software so they could examine the personal data flowing out of the phone. (James Pace-Cornsilik/The Washington Post)

"I know the value of data, and I don't want mine in any hands where it doesn't need to be," he said.

In a world of data brokers, Jackson is the data breaker. He developed an app called Privacy Pro that identifies and blocks many trackers. If you're a little bit techie, I recommend trying the free iOS version to glimpse the secret life of your iPhone.

Yes, trackers are a problem on phones running Google's Android, too. Google won't even let Disconnect's tracker-protection software into its Play Store. (Google's rules prohibit apps that might interfere with another app displaying ads.)

Part of Jackson's objection to trackers is that many feed the personal data economy, used to target us for marketing and political messaging. Facebook's fiascos have made us all more aware of how our data can be passed along, stolen and misused — but Cambridge Analytica was just the beginning.

Jackson's biggest concern is transparency: If we don't know where our data is going, how can we ever hope to keep it private? -WaPo

App Trackers are akin to the cookies used on websites that monitor and report your activity around the internet. In apps, however, there's virtually no notice that this is happening, and they're difficult to block.

So why do the trackers activate in the middle of the night? Some appmakers set them to harvest data whenever the phone is plugged in, or they think it won't interfere with other functions. According to Fowler, "These late-night encounters happen on the iPhone if you have allowed "background app refresh," which is Apple's default."

In the case of Yelp, the company said their app's behavior wasn't actually a tracker, rather, an "unintended issue" that's been mimicking a tracker. According to the company, Fowler's discovery only affects 1% of its iOS users, especially those who have made reservations through Apple Maps. "At best, it is shoddy software that sent Yelp data it didn't need. At worst, Yelp was amassing a data trove that could be used to map people's travels, even when they weren't using its app," notes Fowler.

Popular food delivery app DoorDash is another harvesting offender - which uses a tracker called Sift Science to get a 'fingerprint' of your phone - including device name, model, ad identifier and memory size, as well as an accelerometer motion reading to help identify fraud (so they say). Three other trackers used by DoorDash monitor the app's performance, including one called Segment which routes data such as the delivery address, name, email and cell carrier of the phone's owner.

*DoorDash's other five trackers, including Facebook and Google Ad Services, help it understand the effectiveness of its marketing. Their presence means Facebook and Google know every time you open DoorDash.

The delivery company tells me it doesn't allow trackers to sell or share our data, which is great. But its privacy policy throws its hands up in the air: "DoorDash is not responsible for the privacy practices of these entities," it says.

All but one of DoorDash's nine trackers made Jackson's naughty list for Disconnect, which also powers the Firefox browser's private browsing mode. To him, any third party that collects and retains our data is suspect unless it also has pro-consumer privacy policies like limiting data retention time and anonymizing data. -WaPo*

Some of the other companies mentioned, including Microsoft, Nike and the Weather Channel, insist that their trackers are to improve performance. The Intuit-owned Mint, says it uses Adobe's marketing tracker to better advertise to Mint users. The Washington Post (awkward) told their employee that the trackers "were used to make sure ads worked." Spotify simply directed Fowler to their privacy policy.

Citizen, the app for location-based crime reporting, said in their privacy policy that they wouldn't share "your name or other personally identifying information." When Fowler ran his test, however, he found that "it repeatedly sent my phone number, email and exact GPS coordinates to the tracker Amplitude."

It was only after Citizen was contacted about this that they removed the Amplitude tracker.

"We will do a better job of making sure our privacy policy is clear about the specific types of data we share with providers like these," said Citizen spokesman J. Peter Donald, who added "We do not sell user data. We never have and never will."

What does Apple have to say about all of this?

Fowler was disappointed at the orgy of data harvesting happening at all hours, and asked "isn't Apple supposed to be better at privacy?"

"At Apple we do a great deal to help users keep their data private," Apple said in a statement. "Apple hardware and software are designed to provide advanced security and privacy at every level of the system."

"For the data and services that apps create on their own, our App Store Guidelines require developers to have clearly posted privacy policies and to ask users for permission to collect data before doing so. When we learn that apps have not followed our Guidelines in these areas, we either make apps change their practice or keep those apps from being on the store," said Apple.

Except that Fowler found that very few apps using third-party trackers were actually disclosing the names of those companies, or how they protect his data.

Getting more deeply involved in app data practices is complicated for Apple. Today's technology frequently is built on third-party services, so Apple couldn't simply ban all connections to outside servers. And some companies are so big they don't even need the help of outsiders to track us.

The result shouldn't be to increase Apple's power. "I would like to make sure they're not stifling innovation," says Andrés Arrieta, the director of consumer privacy engineering at the Electronic Frontier Foundation. If Apple becomes the Internet's privacy police, it could shut down rivals. -WaPo

Disconnect's Jackson suggested that Apple might consider adding controls built into the iOS which would give people more visibility, or require apps to clearly disclose when they're using third-party trackers.

"If I opened the DoorDash app and saw nine tracker notices, it might make me think twice about using it," concludes Fowler. Indeed.

While you're sleeping, your iPhone stays busy — snooping on you

Apple says, "What happens on your iPhone stays on your iPhone." Our privacy experiment showed 5,400 hidden app trackers guzzled our data — in a single week.

By THE WASHINGTON POST |

PUBLISHED: May 28, 2019 at 10:48 am | UPDATED: May 28, 2019 at 11:27 am

By Geoffrey A. Fowler | The Washington Post

It's 3 a.m. Do you know what your iPhone is doing?

Mine has been alarmingly busy. Even though the screen is off and I'm snoring, apps are beaming out lots of information about me to companies I've never heard of. Your iPhone probably is doing the same — and Apple could be doing more to stop it.

On a recent Monday night, a dozen marketing companies, research firms and other personal data guzzlers got reports from my iPhone. At 11:43 p.m., a company called Amplitude learned my phone number, email and exact location. At 3:58 a.m., another called Appboy got a digital fingerprint of my phone. At 6:25 a.m., a tracker called Demdex received a way to identify my phone and sent back a list of other trackers to pair up with.

Our data has a secret life in many of the devices we use every day, from talking Alexa speakers to smart TVs. But we've got a giant blind spot when it comes to the data companies probing our phones.

You might assume you can count on Apple to sweat all the privacy details. After all, it touted in a recent ad, "What happens on your iPhone stays on your iPhone." My investigation suggests otherwise.

iPhone apps I discovered tracking me by passing information to third parties – just while I was asleep – include Microsoft OneDrive, Intuit's Mint, Nike, Spotify, The Washington Post and IBM's The Weather Channel. One app, the crime-alert service Citizen, shared personally identifiable information in violation of its published privacy policy.

And your iPhone doesn't feed data trackers only while you sleep. In a single week, I encountered over 5,400 trackers, mostly in apps, not including the incessant Yelp traffic. According to privacy firm Disconnect, which helped test my iPhone, those unwanted trackers would have spewed out 1.5 gigabytes of data over the span of a month. That's half of an entire basic wireless service plan from AT&T.

"This is your data, why should it even leave your phone? Why should it be collected by someone when you don't know what they're going to do with it?" says Patrick Jackson, a former National Security Agency researcher who is chief technology officer for Disconnect. He hooked my iPhone into special software so we could examine the traffic. "I know the value of data, and I don't want mine in any hands where it doesn't need to be."

In a world of data brokers, Jackson is the data breaker. He developed an app called Privacy Pro that identifies and blocks many trackers. If you're a little bit techie, I recommend trying the free iOS version to glimpse the secret life of your iPhone.

Yes, trackers are a problem on phones running Google's Android, too. Google won't even let Disconnect's tracker-protection software into its Play Store. (Google's rules prohibit apps that might interfere with another app displaying ads.)

Part of Jackson's objection to trackers is that many feed the personal data economy, used to target us for marketing and political messaging. Facebook's fiascos have made us all more aware of how our data can be passed along, stolen and misused – but Cambridge Analytica was just the beginning.

Patrick Jackson, chief technology officer for Disconnect, hooked columnist Geoffrey A. Fowler's iPhone into software so they could examine the personal data flowing out of the phone. (James Pace-Cornsilk/The Washington Post)

The app gap

App trackers are like the cookies on websites that slow load times, waste battery life and cause creepy ads to follow you around the Internet. Except in apps, there's little notice trackers are lurking and you can't choose a different browser to block them.

Why do trackers activate in the middle of the night? Some app makers have them call home at times the phone is plugged in, or think they won't interfere with other functions. These late-night encounters happen on the iPhone if you have allowed "background app refresh," which is Apple's default.

With Yelp, the company says the behavior I uncovered wasn't a tracker but rather an "unintended issue" that's been acting like a tracker. Yelp thinks my discovery affects 1 percent of its users, particularly those who've made reservations through Apple Maps. At best, it is shoddy software that sent Yelp data it didn't need. At worst, Yelp was amassing a data trove that could be used to map people's travels, even when they weren't using its app.

A more typical example is DoorDash, the food-delivery service. Launch that app, and you're sending data to nine third-party trackers – though you'd have no way

App makers often use trackers because they're shortcuts to research or revenue. They run the gamut from innocuous to insidious. Some are like consultants that app makers pay to analyze what people tap on and look at. Other trackers pay the app makers, squeezing value out of our data to target ads.

In the case of DoorDash, one tracker called Siftscience gets a fingerprint of your phone (device name, model, ad identifier and memory size) and even accelerometer motion data to help identify fraud. Three more trackers help DoorDash monitor app performance – including one called Segment that routes onward data including your delivery address, name, email and cell carrier.

DoorDash's other five trackers, including Facebook and Google Ad Services, help it understand the effectiveness of its marketing. Their presence means Facebook and Google know every time you open DoorDash.

The delivery company tells me it doesn't allow trackers to sell or share our data, which is great. But its privacy policy throws its hands up in the air: "DoorDash is not responsible for the privacy practices of these entities," it says.

All but one of DoorDash's nine trackers made Jackson's naughty list for Disconnect, which also powers the Firefox browser's private browsing mode. To him, any third party that collects and retains our data is suspect unless it also has pro-consumer privacy policies like limiting data retention time and anonymizing data.

Microsoft, Nike and The Weather Channel told me they were using the trackers I uncovered to improve performance. Mint, owned by Intuit, said it uses an Adobe marketing tracker to help figure out how to advertise to Mint users. The Post said its trackers were used to make sure ads work. Spotify pointed me to its privacy policy.

Privacy policies don't necessarily provide protection. Citizen, the app for location-based crime reports, published that it wouldn't share "your name or other personally identifying information." Yet when I ran my test, I found it repeatedly sent my phone number, email and exact GPS coordinates to the tracker Amplitude.

After I contacted Citizen, it updated its app and removed the Amplitude tracker. (Amplitude, for its part, says data it collects for clients is kept private and not sold.)

"We will do a better job of making sure our privacy policy is clear about the specific types of data we share with providers like these." Citizen spokesman I.

As Jackson kept reminding me: “This is your data.”

The letdown

What disappoints me is that the data free-for-all I discovered is happening on an iPhone. Isn't Apple supposed to be better at privacy?

“At Apple we do a great deal to help users keep their data private,” the company says in a statement. “Apple hardware and software are designed to provide advanced security and privacy at every level of the system.”

In some areas, Apple is ahead. Most of Apple's own apps and services take care to either encrypt data or, even better, to not collect it in the first place. Apple offers a privacy setting called “Limit Ad Tracking” (sadly off by default) which makes it a little bit harder for companies to track you across apps, by way of a unique identifier for every iPhone.

And with iOS 12, Apple took shots at the data economy by improving the “intelligent tracking prevention” in its Safari web browser.

Yet these days, we spend more time in apps. Apple is strict about requiring apps to get permission to access certain parts of the iPhone, including your camera, microphone, location, health information, photos and contacts. (You can check and change those permissions under privacy settings.) But Apple turns more of

“For the data and services that apps create on their own, our App Store Guidelines require developers to have clearly posted privacy policies and to ask users for permission to collect data before doing so. When we learn that apps have not followed our Guidelines in these areas, we either make apps change their practice or keep those apps from being on the store,” Apple says.

Yet very few apps I found using third-party trackers disclosed the names of those companies or how they protect my data. And what good is burying this information in privacy policies, anyway? What we need is accountability.

Getting more deeply involved in app data practices is complicated for Apple. Today’s technology frequently is built on third-party services, so Apple couldn’t simply ban all connections to outside servers. And some companies are so big they don’t even need the help of outsiders to track us.

The result shouldn’t be to increase Apple’s power. “I would like to make sure they’re not stifling innovation,” says Andrés Arrieta, the director of consumer privacy engineering at the Electronic Frontier Foundation. If Apple becomes the Internet’s privacy police, it could shut down rivals.

Jackson suggests Apple could also add controls into iOS like the ones built into Privacy Pro to give everyone more visibility.

Or perhaps Apple could require apps to label when they’re using third-party trackers. If I opened the DoorDash app and saw nine tracker notices, it might make think twice about using it.

Good Afternoon (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

Per our conversation last week, I've attached the updated market research. This includes updated pricing and reflects the "true" cost of Locate X independent of any Babel X subscriptions. I hope this simplifies things and let me know if you have any questions.

COMPETITION
SOLE SOURCE

REQ # 192119VHQNGU0001

In accordance with the requirements of Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) Subpart 16.505(b) (1) (ii), the competition requirements in FAR Part 6 and the policies in FAR Part 15.3 do not apply to the ordering process for acquisitions conducted under multiple award contracts. However, this justification is prepared per FAR 16.505(b) (2) (ii). Only one awardee is capable of providing the supplies or services required at the level of quality required because the supplies or services ordered are unique or highly specialized.

1. Agency and Contracting Activity:

U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS)
Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)
Office of Acquisition Management (OAQ-Dallas)
7701 North Stemmons Freeway, (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)
Dallas, Texas 75247

2. Nature and/or Description of the Action Being Approved:

This is a "Sole Source Justification" for Software licenses.

Proposed Vendor-	Venntel Inc
	2201 Cooperative Way
	(b)(6); (b)(7)(C)
	Herndon, VA 20171
	(571) 247 (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)
	Attn: (b)(6); (b)(7)(C)@venntel.com
Total Amount-	(b)(4)
Quantity-	(b)(4)

3. Description of Supplies/Services:

(b)(7)(E)

(b)(4); (b)(7)(E)

4. Identification of Statutory Authority Permitting Other than Full and Open Competition:

Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) 16.505(b)(2)(i)(B) authorizes the exception to fair opportunity when “Only one awardee is capable of providing the supplies or services required at the level of quality required because the supplies or services ordered are unique or highly specialized.” The competition requirements in FAR Part 6 and the policies in FAR Part 15.3 do not apply to the ordering process for acquisitions conducted under multiple award contracts under FAR Part 16. This justification is prepared per FAR 16.505(b)(2)(ii).

5. Demonstration That the Nature of the Acquisition Requires the Use Of The Authority Cited:

The use of the sole source vendor for the software license in the acquisition process is essential to the Government’s requirements. thereby precluding consideration from any other vendor. To support the following requirements.

- A. (b)(7)(E)
- B.

6. Efforts to Obtain Competition:

This is a sole source justification for the software license. The proposed vendor and market research are outlined within this document.

7. Determination by the Contracting Officer That the Anticipated Cost To The Government Will Be Fair and Reasonable:

The anticipated price offered by the vendor is fair and reasonable based on the immediate need for HSI special agents, and TFOs assigned to HSI TOC units, to deploy critical equipment that will enhance officer and public safety.

Ultimately; The Contracting Officer will evaluate the fairness and reasonableness of the proposed price.

8. Description of Market Research

It was determined that Venntel, Inc. was the only suitable vendor for ICE purposes based upon the Agency's immediate need to equip personnel assigned to HSI TOC units with these critical officer and public safety tools.

9. Any Other Facts Supporting the Use of Other than Full and Open Competition

(b)(7)(E)

10. A Listing of the Sources, If Any, That Expressed In Writing an Interest In The Acquisition

At this time, we have not located any other vendors that provide this capability.

11. A Statement of the Actions, If Any, the Agency May Take To Remove or Overcome Any Barriers to Competition before Any Subsequent Acquisition for Supplies or Services Required:

HSI will continue to do market research and look for any competitive and cost effective measures that can satisfy the agency's future needs for this type of procurement.

12. CERTIFICATIONS

I certify that this requirement meets the Government's minimum need and that the supporting data, which forms a basis for this justification, is complete and accurate:

Requirements/Technical Personnel:

(b)(6); (b)(7)(C)

Name

Contracting Officer:

This justification is accurate and complete to the best of my knowledge and belief.
