A message from the Director….

Michael Barrett
State Public Defender

The foremost principles embodied in the U.S. Constitution are individual liberty and equal rights under the law. These essential guarantees, embedded in the Bill of Rights, is what binds us as Americans. Throughout our lives, we may each come to know varied degrees of advancement, education, and wealth, but it is equality under the law and freedom that makes us uniquely American.

And that's precisely what the Missouri State Public Defender was established to ensure - that these rights remain guaranteed for poor persons, as well as the well-resourced, so that an individual is not deprived of his or her liberty without first receiving competent counsel and the due process that is required by the U.S. and Missouri Constitutions. Quite simply, our attorneys and staff work tirelessly to ensure that everyone is treated equally under the law.

And while these principles of freedom and equality are often touted by elected leaders, Missouri regretfully continues to rank 49th out of 50 states in the public support it provides for indigent criminal defense. Not only has this lack of resources resulted in shockingly high caseloads and significant turnover among staff given the low salaries and workload stress, it has also resulted in a continued increase in the state's prison population despite the opposing national trend. These realities have been affirmed by both an independent review by the American Bar Association (The Missouri Project, 2014) and a recent report by the U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division.

Challenging the government's evidence and presenting a substantial defense for every individual defendant is not only our constitutional obligation, it is necessary to ensure that people are not wrongfully convicted of a crime. Given the high caseloads carried by each MSPD attorney, courts and policymakers must recognize that this is not only a realistic possibility, but a substantial likelihood.

But it is not always about guilt or innocence. Oftentimes, the public defender works to come up with an alternative plan to incarceration when someone can be managed in the community, saving taxpayers millions and helping the client stay connected with both family and employer in order to reestablish him or herself as a contributing member of society. These efforts are often aimed at addressing the very issue that is precipitating the alleged misconduct, such as the alcoholic who is not paying his child support or the military veteran who needs treatment for post-dramatic stress disorder.

As Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, it is my honor to not only advocate on behalf of the tens of thousands of Missourians that we represent each year, but also on behalf of the hundreds of attorneys and support staff who work every day to protect liberty and ensure equality under the law.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Who We Are & What We Do…

What is the Missouri Public Defender System?

The Missouri State Public Defender System [MSPD] is a statewide system that provides legal representation to poor persons who are accused or convicted of state crimes in Missouri's trial, appellate, and Supreme courts. Carrying out these functions fulfills the state's obligation to provide the right to counsel under the state and U.S. Constitutions to those who cannot afford it.

MSPD is an independent department of state government, located within, but not supervised by, the judicial branch. Instead, it is governed by a seven-member Public Defender Commission, each of whom is appointed by the governor. Commissioners serve six year terms and no more than four may be of the same political party. The Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, Michael Barrett and Deputy Director, Joel Elmer, are appointed by the Public Defender Commission.

Who qualifies for a public defender?

The standard to qualify for public defender representation is a creature of both statute and rule that includes a number of objective and discretionary factors to determine whether someone can afford an attorney. The rule promulgated by the Public Defender Commission would deem someone eligible if their income was less than 100% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines. Other factors are also considered such as debt, assets, ability to post bond, public assistance, and dependents. If MSPD determines that an applicant is not indigent, he or she has the right to appeal to the court for an independent review of their eligibility.

Who works for MSPD?

MSPD employs 587 employees, 376 of whom are attorneys. The department is divided into a Trial Division, an Appellate/ Post-Conviction Division, and a Capital Division, each of which is described in greater detail on pages 18, 57, and 62, respectively.

Other staff includes investigators, capital mitigation specialists, paralegals, legal assistants and clerks. An operations staff provides centralized information technology support, fiscal, and human resources services to the 44 district offices located around the state, as well as managing MSPD's contracting of conflict cases to private counsel, which is described in more detail on page 66.

Mission Statement

The mission of the Missouri State Public Defender System is to provide high quality, zealous advocacy for indigent people who are accused of crime in the State of Missouri.

The lawyers, administrative staff, and support staff of the Public Defender System will ensure that this advocacy is not compromised.

To provide this uncompromised advocacy, the Missouri State Defender System will supply each client with a high-quality, competent, ardent defense team at every stage of the process in which public defenders are necessary.

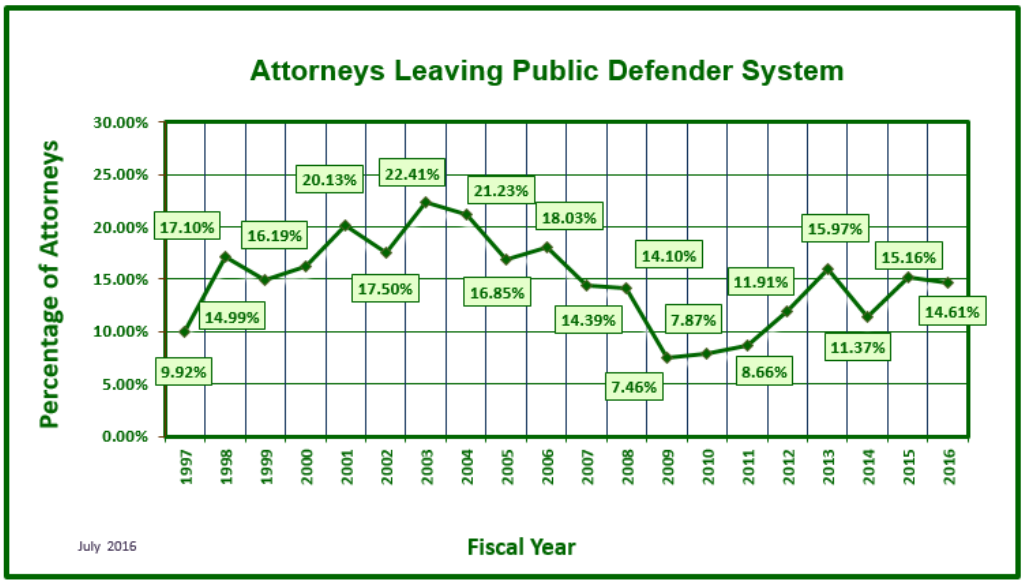
Missouri Public Defenders:
Salary Information

Assistant Public Defender Starting Salaries July 1, 2016
Assistant Public Defender I	$39,708
Assistant Public Defender II	$46,992
Assistant Public Defender III	$52,116
Assistant Public Defender IV	$69,528

Providing effective assistance of counsel in each case demands a well-trained, highly experienced corps of dedicated attorneys and support staff. However, excessive caseloads and low salaries lead to a high turnover rate among attorney staff, which makes fulfilling this important mission difficult, if not impossible. After MSPD began hitting turnover rates of 20-22% in the mid-2000's, repositioning salary adjustments were enacted to bring salaries to the levels shown above. The fact that just these small changes were enough to make MSPD's attorney turnover drop several significant percentage points -- though still among the highest turnover classifications in state government – is proof that most public defenders do want to remain in public service if at all possible. However, staggering student debt loans ($60,000—$200,000) make it extremely difficult for even those who are passionate about public interest work to continue with MSPD if they want to also make loan payments and provide for their families.



The recession that hit in 2008 was actually much more effective in reducing attorney turnover. Private law firms stopped hiring and senior attorneys on the verge of setting up their own private practice put plans on hold, given the state of the economy. This combination gave MSPD a temporary reprieve from the revolving door, dropping turnover as low as 7.5%; but the reprieve was only temporary. The underlying factors that have perennially caused high attorney turnover continue. Missouri's public defenders still struggle with staggering student loan debt and much lower salaries than what other government lawyers receive. Caseloads are still overwhelming and lawyers still enjoy no immunity from either civil liability or disciplinary action for their failures to handle that caseload effectively, no matter how impossible that task might be.

The District Defenders who head each of MSPD's District offices around the state are equally far behind their counterparts, both within the Missouri criminal justice system and in the field of public defense nationally. Missouri's full time elected prosecuting attorneys are required by state statute to be paid the same as an Associate Circuit Judge, $136,402. By comparison their Public Defender counterparts are paid an average of a mere $79,601. This level of pay inequity between the defense and prosecution sides of the criminal justice system is neither equitable nor sustainable.

Public Defender Appropriations

General Revenue: Missouri State Public Defender (MSPD) funding is almost entirely from state general revenue. It comes in three appropriations:

Personal Service: Used to pay the salaries of all MSPD employees.

Expense & Equipment: Used to pay the overhead costs of operations, such as office supplies and equipment, employee travel expenses, and rent and utilities for the statewide offices.

Litigation & Contracting Expenses: Used to pay the cost of contracting cases out to private counsel and litigation expenses on both MSPD cases and those cases contracted out to private counsel. Litigation expenses include the cost of experts, depositions, transcripts, exhibits, independent testing of evidence, etc.

Legal Defense and Defender Fund: This appropriation is not money given to MSPD but the authorization to spend money collected by MSPD up to the ceiling of the appropriation. The collections associated with this fund are the result of Section 600.090 RSMo, which requires public defenders to collect fees from clients receiving public defender service. Fees are deposited into the Legal Defense and Defender Fund and used to fund all public defender training as well as pay for such miscellaneous expenditures as computer lines, WestLaw, bar dues for the system's 376 attorneys, etc. In FY16 MSPD collected $1.361 million through client payments.

The personal service component of the LDDF appropriation authorizes MSPD to pay the salaries of two employees, the system's Director of Training and the Training Assistant, out of the moneys collected rather than through the general revenue personal service appropriation.

Debt Offset Escrow Fund: This is not an appropriation of actual money, but an authorization for MSPD to collect funds through the state's debt offset program. Under this program, taxpayers due a refund of state income tax who owe a debt to the state may have their refund intercepted and used to pay down the debt instead. MSPD participates in this program to collect payments on the fees described above. The money collected through this program is not in addition to the LDDF collections, but a subset thereof.

Grants: Another 'permission' appropriation, rather than actual money appropriation, this authorizes MSPD to collect up to $125,000 in grants from the federal government or other sources. The last time MSPD collected a federal grant was in the mid-1990's to help start-up an Alternative Sentencing Program of social workers to develop client-specific sentencing plans as a way to reduce recidivism. That program proved successful and was picked up and funded by the state after the federal grant expired. Unfortunately, the growing caseload crisis and attorney shortage this past decade required MSPD to dismantle the program in order to turn the social worker FTE into more attorney positions.

Actual Funding: In all, in FY16, MSPD received a total of $37.381 million from the combination of general revenue ($36,422,010) and actual collections under the LDDF program ($1,361,017).

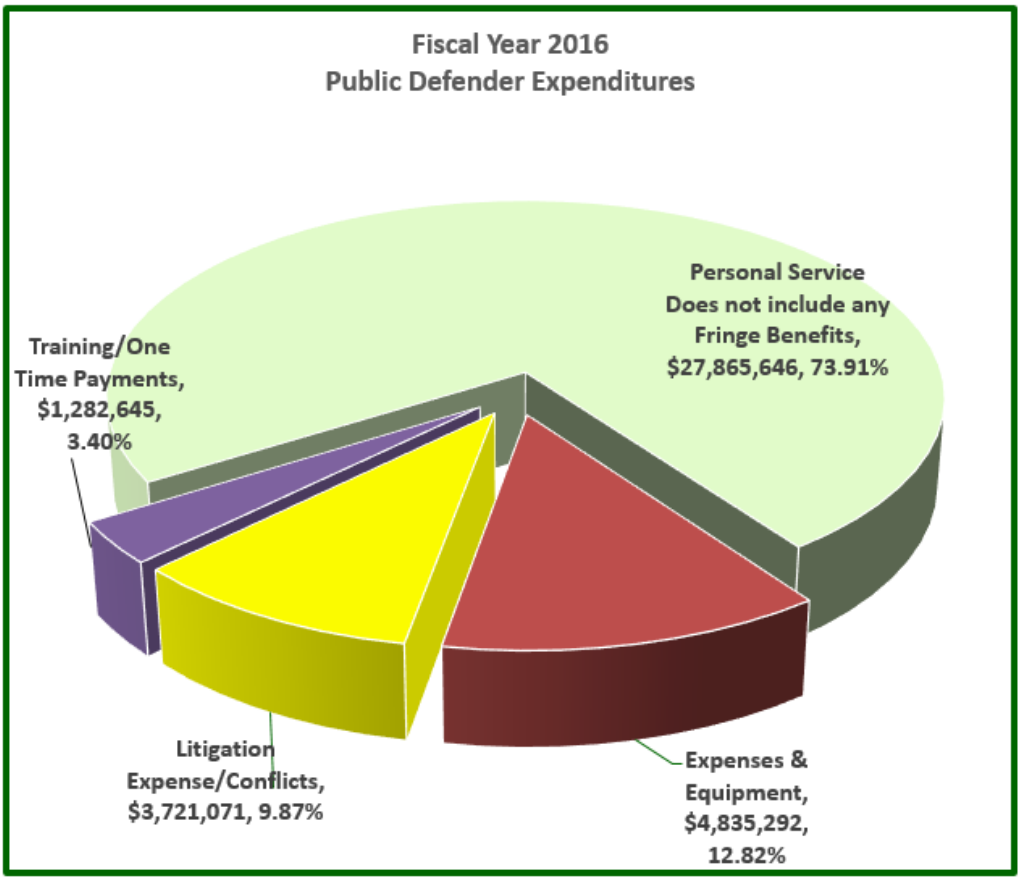
Note: Public Defender General Revenue Appropriation is less than 1/2 of 1% of the State's General Revenue Appropriations.



Collections from clients for the indigent defense services provided to them are generally collected through two revenue streams. Approximately 40% of collections comes through state income tax refund intercepts by the Department of Revenue. The remainder is generally collected by courts who collect payments of the Public Defender fees along with court costs at the close of a case.

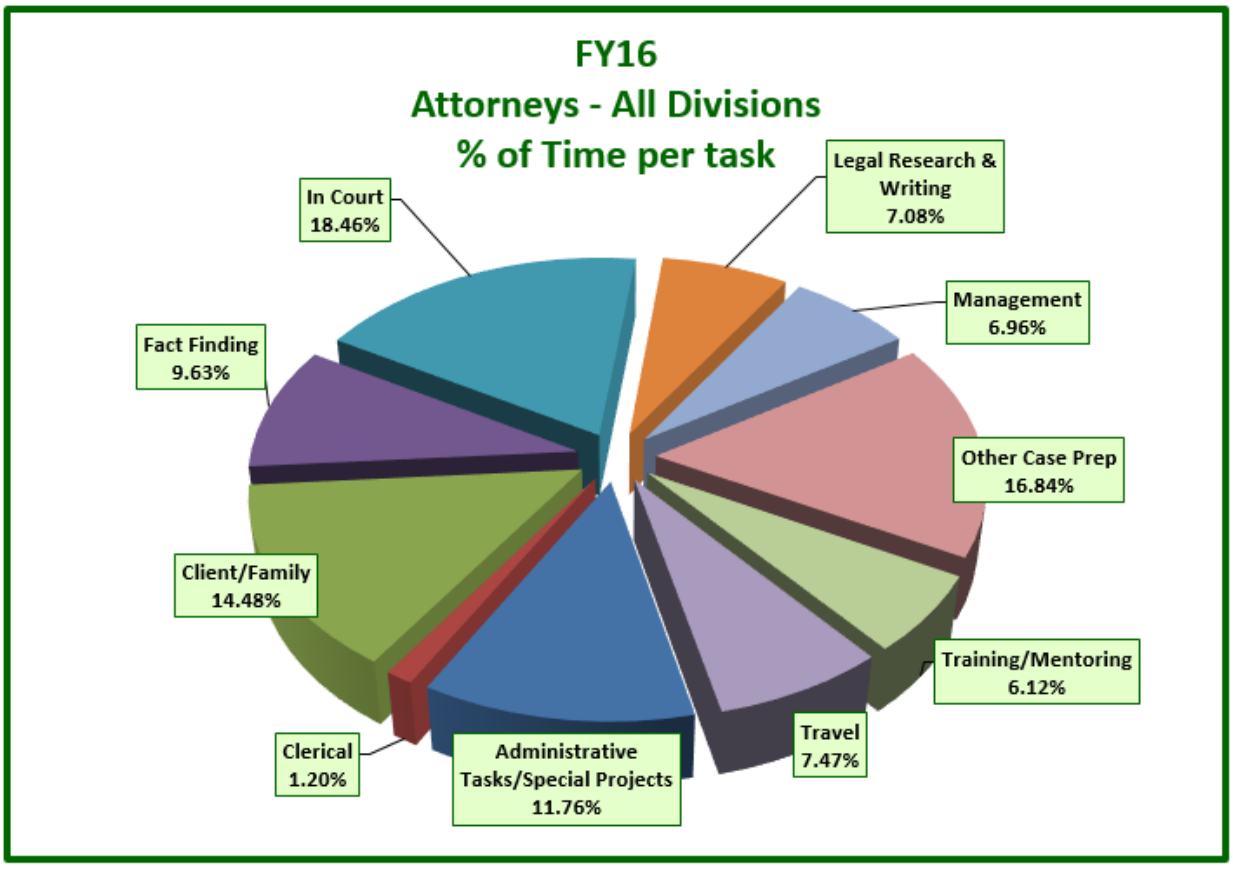
On March 1, 2013, MSPD began recording time according to task and case type. While public defender time-keeping had been instituted once before, in 2006, as part of a twelve-week workload study, this new time-keeping approach is not a one-time study, but a permanent change in MSPD's way of doing business. Employee time-logs are kept in five-minute increments and are completed by MSPD attorneys, investigators and mitigation specialists.

The time-keeping program allows MSPD management to expand or collapse the number of categories and tasks tracked. This flexibility permits the periodic collection of much more detailed data for use in workload studies or tracking a particular issue of concern, while also permitting the collapse of multiple tasks into simpler-to-use broader categories for the ongoing tracking of time.



On July 31, 2014, RubinBrown, one of the nation's leading accounting firms, working on behalf of the of the ABA's Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants, released its data-driven report, "The Missouri Project: A Study of the Missouri Public Defender System and Attorney Workload Standards." In arriving at its workload standards, RubinBrown used MSPD's time-keeping data as well as surveys of both MSPD practitioners and private criminal defense attorneys in Missouri to identify case-related tasks that MSPD attorneys had either sufficient or insufficient time to perform based upon current practices and staffing levels. With that time-keeping data and survey results in hand, the Missouri Project then utilized a Delphi method, a business forecasting tool, to estimate the amount of time that should be allotted for those tasks with reasonable effectiveness. The workload standards developed provide empirical evidence that there are not enough public defenders in Missouri to meet its constitutional mandate of providing effective assistance of counsel to indigent persons charged with criminal offenses. Since its release, The Missouri Project has served as a model for other attorney workload standards in the indigent defense community across our nation.

The workload standards developed by RubinBrown are below:

	Client Communication[1]	Discovery/Investigation[2]	Case Preparation[3]	Total
Murder/Homicide	34.6	33.5	38.5	106.6
AB Felony	13.1	18.3	16.2	47.6
CD Felony	6.3	8.4	10.3	25.0
Sex Felony	22.5	17.8	23.6	63.8
Misdemeanor	3.5	4.1	4.1	11.7
Juvenile	5.4	6.8	7.3	19.5
Appellate/PCR	20.3	31.5	44.7	96.5
Probation Violation	2.9	2.6	4.2	9.8

Comparing the above standards to the below table of average case-related hours recorded through MSPD's time keeping system, the crisis facing Missouri's indigent defense system is apparent:

	Client Communication[1]	Discovery/Investigation[2]	Case Preparation[3]	Total
Murder/Homicide	14.8	33.5	36.2	84.5
AB Felony	3.0	2.1	3.6	8.7
CD Felony	1.8	0.8	1.7	4.4
Sex Felony	6.0	7.3	12.4	25.6
Misdemeanor	0.9	0.4	0.9	2.3
Juvenile	1.4	1.0	2.1	4.6
Appellate/PCR	3.1	7.5	19.6	30.3
Probation Violation	0.7	0.2	0.5	1.4

1. The client communication Case Task group includes: in person conversations, phone calls, written communication, and communication with family.

2. The discovery/investigation Case Task group includes: State's discovery disclosures, records and transcripts, depositions and witness interviews, and expert and technical research.

3. The case preparation Case Task group includes: legal research, drafting and writing, plea negotiations, alternative sentencing research, court preparation, and case management.

The stark discrepancy between what work must be done in the proper defense of constitutional liberty and what is being done with the limited resources at hand reveals that MSPD is in need of 169.50 additional attorneys to meet constitutional requirements.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Trial Division

These are the trial lawyers, the ones Missouri's indigent defendants first turn to upon being arrested and charged with a crime. The lawyers usually enter on their cases at or soon after a defendant's first appearance in associate circuit court following an arrest and will continue representing the defendant through the entire associate and circuit court process – up to and including any plea or trial and, if convicted, the sentencing hearing. The division consists of 33 district trial offices providing representation in 94.5% of the cases that make up the system's caseload.

MSPD's Trial Division attorneys handle every type of state criminal case in which the law includes a possible jail sentence among the penalty options for the court to consider -- from traffic offenses, conservation, and 'Minor in Possession of Alcohol' offenses up to and including non-capital murder cases. (Capital Murder cases are handled by the MSPD Capital Division.) The Trial Division also provides representation in petitions for release from the Department of Mental Health which is discussed further below.

A MSPD Trial Division Attorney's practice will generally include:

- bond hearings for those defendants who are confined pre-trial and seeking release, which can include verifying a place to stay, finding a sponsor the court is likely to trust, verifying an employer will take them back to work, etc.;
- preliminary hearings;
- tracking down and reviewing all of the state's discovery – police reports, lab reports, witness statements, hospital records, etc.;
- interviewing or deposing the key state's witnesses;
- locating and interviewing potential defense witnesses;
- tracking down records and evidence that may help establish the defendant's innocence;
- visiting crime scenes or re-enacting a described crime to see if the real thing matches up with what witnesses described;
- reviewing the results and original notes and data from forensic tests conducted by the state, determining whether an independent analysis by an expert who doesn't work for the state is warranted, and if so, finding that expert and arranging for the testing of the evidence;
- making initial assessments of the defendant's ability to understand the legal proceedings and, when the defendant exhibits developmental or mental disabilities, arranging for an expert to evaluate the defendant to make that determination;
- researching the law applicable to the defendant's case and litigating motions where it appears the defendant has not been properly charged, the law has not been followed, or the state is seeking to put on evidence of questionable admissibility or reliability;
- negotiating plea agreements with the prosecutor, as well as locating and litigating for sentencing options that could effectively address the problems that resulted in the defendant getting into trouble in the first place and thus reduce the likelihood of recidivism; or

- if the case is one that goes to a trial, conducting that trial, before either a judge or jury, as well as being present and advising the client concerning all the court appearances a defendant will be required to make as his case progresses through the criminal justice system;
- and of course meeting with and advising the client, and perhaps the client's family members if the client requests it, throughout each of the above processes.

As the above list indicates, an attorney's appearance in court on behalf of a defendant is a very small portion of the work they must do on a case. When they have too many cases, some of these steps are skipped or fall by the way side. The state's evidence is taken at face value, assumed by all to be accurate and mistakes fall through the cracks, uncaught and uncorrected. The result is that individual defendants and justice as a whole suffers.

Types of Cases Handled by the Trial Division

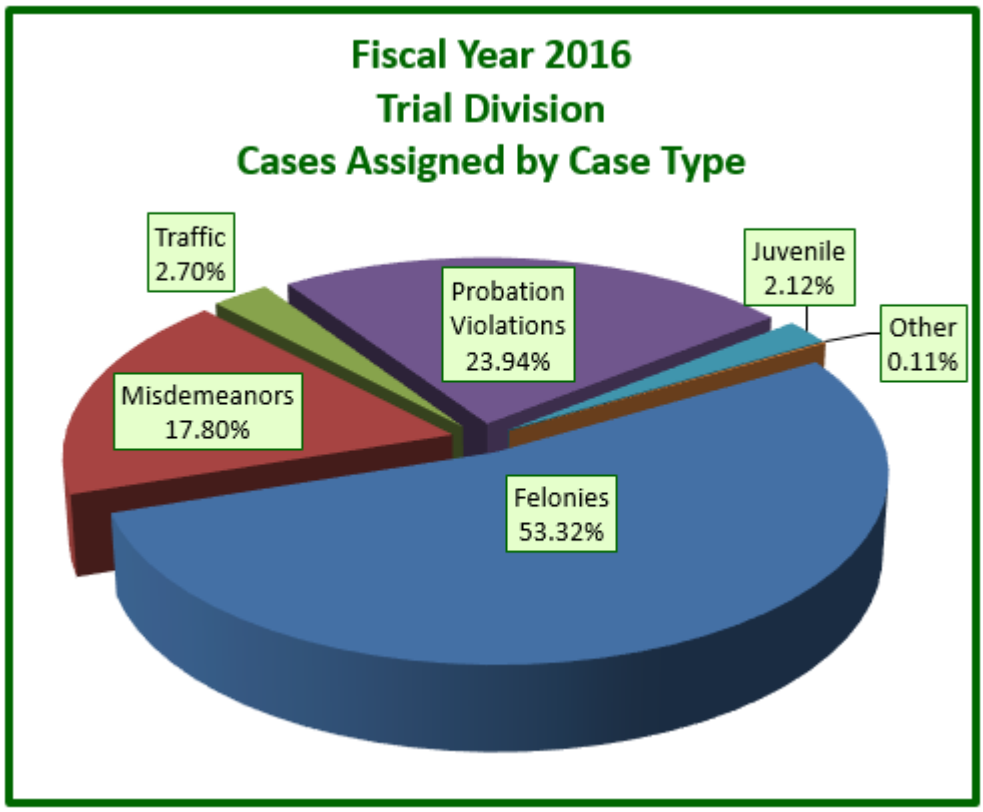
FELONY OFFENSES: As the pie chart on the following page shows, 52.24% of the Trial Division caseload in FY15 was made up of felony offenses. These are charges which carry penitentiary time, ranging from one to four years of imprisonment for the lowest level felonies up to life in prison without the possibility of probation or parole for the most serious offenses.

MISDEMEANOR OFFENSES: Misdemeanor offenses are those which carry jail time as a possible sentence, but any jail time imposed would be served in the county jail rather than the state's penitentiary. The maximum sentence on the highest level misdemeanor offenses is one year incarceration.

JUVENILE CASES: Missouri's juvenile courts have jurisdiction over anyone under the age of 17 who is accused of committing an offense that would be a crime if that person were an adult. They also have jurisdiction over various 'status offenses' – things that apply only to juveniles and not to adults. Examples of these would be Truancy and Incorrigibility. Some Missouri courts appoint private attorneys for juveniles who cannot hire their own attorneys, but a number of counties, particularly those in the urban areas with more significant juvenile caseloads, continue to rely on the public defender to provide defense representation to these children.

PROBATION VIOLATION CASES: These are cases in which the defendant has already been through the court system on an underlying charge and placed on probation. The new case arises from the allegation that the defendant has in some way violated the conditions of his/her probation. Violations can arise from new criminal behavior, whether or not any criminal charges were filed; so an arrest alone can be grounds for a probation violation. A defendant may also face a violation proceeding for what are known as technical violations, which are violations of conditions put in place at the time of the probation. These can include such things as failing a drug test, failure to report to the probation officer as instructed, failure to complete an ordered treatment or education program, etc.

PETITIONS FOR RELEASE: Another type of civil commitment in which the public defender is involved are those following a finding of Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity [NGRI]. A defendant found to be NGRI is automatically committed to the Department of Mental Health for treatment. Petitions for Release are the requests by those so committed to now be released from the Department of Mental Health. Some who have already been released from the mental institution on a conditional release are asking to be unconditionally released, free of the ongoing supervision and conditions of the Department of Mental Health. The issue in both such petitions is whether the defendant's mental illness is sufficiently under control that he or she no longer poses a threat to themselves or to others. These petitions are litigated before a judge, rather than a jury.



FAQ: Why does MSPD count probation violations as separate cases when the courts and prosecutors do not?

It is the practice of Missouri's prosecutors and courts to hold open the original case out of which probation arose, for the duration of the probationary period. As a result, they then treat probation violations as simply another proceeding within the original case.

By contrast, it is the practice of MSPD and the defense bar as a whole to close out a case once the defendant is placed on probation. Neither group of defense attorneys, private or public, is willing or able to commit to continuing to represent, counsel, or maintain contact with that client over the course of his / her probation (which on a felony case can last up to five years) as would be ethically required of them as defense counsel if they maintained these as open cases for the duration of the probationary period.

If a probation violation is later filed, private defense attorneys generally expect a separate retainer in order to represent the defendant on that probation violation. This is why MSPD winds up with many probation violation cases in which the defendant had private counsel on the underlying charge. The defendant cannot come up with the additional money to pay the private attorney to handle the new probation violation matter. By the same token, MSPD is seldom in a position to re-assign to the defendant the same attorney who handled the underlying charge in his case. In either situation, therefore, a new attorney-client relationship must be established just as in any other new case.

Any evidence of a probation violation is gathered and reported to the court and prosecutor by the probation officer. The review of that evidence, investigation of its accuracy, the review of the law that applies to the circumstances of this revocation proceeding and the investigation into and presentation to the judge of other sentencing alternatives in lieu of revocation is the obligation of defense counsel. If done correctly, this is very comparable to the work that is required in any other criminal case and therefore MSPD counts it as a case in its own right.

COUNTY VS CIRCUIT SYSTEMS

Missouri's 33 trial offices provide defense representation to indigent defendants in all of Missouri's 114 counties plus the City of St. Louis. Some of the urban offices serve only one county, but most of the offices serving rural counties are responsible for several counties. The office with the largest geographic spread is District 43, located in Chillicothe, which serves eleven counties. Most offices, however, cover between three and five counties.

Currently, the geographic areas covered by defender offices do not coincide with Missouri's judicial circuits, even though the district numbers assigned to each office will often be the same as that of one of the judicial circuits the office serves. For example, one public defender office may serve only two of the three counties in a particular judicial circuit, while also providing service in two counties from an adjoining judicial circuit.

This arrangement will be changing as the result of legislation enacted in the Spring of 2013. HB215 requires that the Missouri Public Defender Commission, which is responsible for determining where public defender offices are established and their boundaries of service, begin the move toward making public defender districts congruent with judicial circuits. A plan for implementing that change was submitted to the Legislature on December 2015 and final implementation of the revised districts is to be completed by December 31, 2021. Under the legislation, one district office may serve more than one judicial circuit, but circuits may not be split between more than one district office.

MSPD tracks both assigned and disposed of cases for each fiscal year, and both of those numbers for FY2016 can be found within this Annual Report. However, those two numbers are generally not tracking the same cases. Many cases take more than a year from assignment to disposition and many more do not fall neatly, start to finish, within a single fiscal year. The above chart reflects the reality that no lawyer begins the fiscal year with an empty file drawer. At the start of FY2016, Missouri's Trial Division public defenders had over 31,738 pending cases already on their desks, to which another 76,150 new cases were assigned over the course of the fiscal year.

Public Defender
Appellate/Post Conviction Relief Division

MSPD's Appellate/PCR Division consists of six offices, with two offices located in St. Louis, two in Columbia, and two in Kansas City. In St. Louis and Kansas City, both offices do both appeals and PCR's and handle conflict cases for one another. Having a second office down the hall avoids having to transfer conflict cases to an attorney on the other side of the state. In Columbia, one office handles exclusively appeals and the other office handles exclusively post-conviction cases.

Appeals: Direct appeals are the first step in seeking to set aside or overturn a conviction after a trial. The process involves asking the Court of Appeals and /or the Missouri Supreme Court, to review and grant relief because of mistakes made by the trial court. The attorneys review the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents, and evidence introduced in the case and then present to the appellate courts, through written briefs and oral argument, the errors that were made in the lower court and the law supporting relief. MSPD's appellate attorneys handle cases in the Eastern, Western, and Southern Districts and in both the Missouri and U.S. Supreme Court.

Post-conviction Cases: Post-Conviction cases (or PCR's) are collateral attacks on a conviction after the appellate process has been exhausted, and can include challenges to the legitimacy of the appellate process in a case as well as the trial court proceedings. Unlike an appeal, which can only follow a trial, a PCR can also be filed after a guilty plea. These proceedings are conducted in the circuit courts in all 114 counties across the state and the City of St. Louis and include capital as well as non-capital cases.

In a post-conviction case, the focus is on constitutional violations that could not be corrected at the appellate level. For example, if an attorney fails to object at the right time at a trial, the trial court's mistake is not preserved for appeal and the appellate court will usually not review it. However, through a PCR proceeding , a court can examine the attorney's failure to make the right objection and the likelihood the defendant would have gotten relief on appeal had the attorney done it correctly. If the court in the PCR hearing finds that, but for the attorney's ineffectiveness, the defendant likely would have had a different result, relief may be granted.

Attorneys handling PCR cases must do much of the same work as their appellate counterparts -- reviewing the trial transcript, the trial court file, all the legal documents, and evidence introduced in the case; but instead of then writing briefs and doing oral arguments for the appellate court, they draft motions to set aside the conviction and conduct evidentiary hearings at the circuit court level. To prepare for these, the PCR attorneys must figure out what the trial attorney should have done, but didn't, and then do it themselves. This can include a fair amount of case re-investigation, such as locating and presenting witnesses the trial attorney failed to locate or present, presenting the testimony of an expert the trial attorney failed to obtain, or putting on new evidence of innocence that was never provided by the state prior to trial. If a post-conviction claim is denied at the lower court level, there is a right to an appeal of that denial.

Private Attorney Cases: In addition to the direct appeals and post-conviction matters arising out of cases initially handled at the trial level by public defenders, our Appellate/PCR attorneys get many cases from the private bar. It is frequently the case that the money to pay counsel has run out by the time a trial is complete and the appellate and post-conviction processes therefore fall back to the public defender.

Missouri Public Defenders
Capital Division

MSPD's Capital Division provides defense representation in first degree murder cases in which the state is seeking the death penalty, as well as for juveniles facing the possibility of life without parole in non-capital murder first degree cases. They also handle direct appeals in cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed. If their caseloads permit, they may occasionally also take on a non-capital murder case from an overloaded trial office.

The division consists of three offices, one in St. Louis, one in Columbia, and one in Kansas City. Because of the complexity of death penalty cases, attorneys handling capital cases are limited to no more than six open capital cases at a time. Two attorneys, an investigator, and a mitigation specialist are assigned to each case.

Missouri Public Defenders
Commitment Defense Unit

MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit was created 2003 in response to Missouri's adoption of new 'Sexually Violent Predator' civil commitment laws. After a person convicted of certain sexual offenses has completed his prison sentence, the state may seek to have him adjudicated as a 'sexually violent predator' and have him civilly committed to the state's Sex Offender Rehabilitation and Treatment Services institution. The public defenders working in MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit [CDU] provide defense representation to these defendants during both their initial commitment hearing and jury trial and thereafter, to determine whether he or she remains a danger to the community.

At the time this program was created, MSPD received two additional attorneys to handle the anticipated increase in workload from these new commitment proceedings. Today, MSPD has had to pull three more lawyers from the overloaded Trial Division to help handle the growing CDU caseload.

Case Contracting

Historically, MSPD has contracted approximately 5 percent of its annual caseload to private attorneys. Contracted cases generally fall into one of two categories:

(1) Conflicts: The majority of the cases contracted out to private attorneys are second and third-level conflict cases. A conflict case is one in which the local defender office ethically cannot provide representation – usually because they already represent a co-defendant or perhaps a witness in the same case. In that circumstance, the local office sends the client they cannot represent to one of the next nearest defender offices for representation. These are called first-level conflict cases. Where there are more than just two individuals needing representation who are involved in a conflict, (i.e. second and third level conflicts), representation of the additional clients is more likely to be provided by private panel attorneys, who are paid to provide representation on a case-by-case basis. This is more practical and efficient than assigning these clients to yet other defender offices which are even further away from the county in which the case is being heard.

(2) Caseload Relief: Occasionally, MSPD is able to use vacancy savings to contract out excess cases to private counsel to give especially overloaded or short-staffed offices some workload relief. Funds for these kinds of contracts are not sufficient to solve the work overload, but when available, can provide some relief in especially pressurized offices.

Private criminal defense practitioners can apply to be a panel attorney for MSPD, designating both the counties in which they practice and the types of cases for which they are qualified. Once accepted onto the Panel, they are asked to enter into a Panel Attorney Memorandum of Agreement with MSPD, after which they will be placed in the rotation to receive case assignments in their areas of availability. More information for those interested in participating in MSPD's Panel Attorney Program can be found at http://publicdefender.mo.gov/contracts/MSPD_Contracting.html.

Fee Schedule for Contracting

MSPD utilizes a modified flat fee rate for contract cases. This is a base fee corresponding to the type of case with provisions for additional payment if the case should go to trial. The base fee may also be negotiated upward if the case is a particularly complex one or has special circumstances that may require work above and beyond the norm for its case type or if we are unable to locate a qualified attorney who will take the case at the rate on the schedule, as does sometimes happen. The typical contract fee schedule used by MSPD in FY16 is shown below:

Litigation expenses (expert witness fees and travel costs, depositions, transcripts, case investigation, etc) are not included in the attorney's fee. Those types of expenditures are approved separately and must each be submitted to MSPD for approval by MSPD's Deputy Director prior to being incurred.

In FY16, MSPD contracted approximately 3.58% of its total caseload to the private bar. In FY16, MSPD spent $2,143,298.22 to contract out 2,893 cases, at an average cost per case of $740.86.

During the 2014 Legislative Session, the legislature truly agreed to and finally passed $3,472,238 to permit MSPD to contract out ALL of its conflict cases, including first-level conflicts, to private counsel as part of its FY2015 budget. The Governor line item vetoed these additional funds. During the Legislative Veto Session, this line item veto was overridden by the General Assembly and the funds were added to MSPD's core budget. During FY2015, the Governor released only $500,000 of these funds. Note: In Fiscal Year 2016, MSPD Appropriations Core was cut by the $3,472,238. In Fiscal Year 2017, $4,500,000 was added to MSPD's budget. As of August 1, 2016, the Governor is withholding $3,500,000 of these funds.
